A HEAVILY CAMBERED CORNER.

Road Cambering : Its Difficulties and Dangers : Novices Negotiating Hills : Engine Stalling : Oiling an Engine ; Prevention of Squeaks.

While road transport in this and other countries has made rapid strides in the last eight or ten years, the same cannot be said of the construction of our highways or the attempts made to meet the demands of the fast moving traffic of to-day. No doubt, the surfacing of the main roads of the country has been improved immensely, narrow stretches widened, and many bad and dangerous corners removed; but, with the exception of one county in the Free State, all the road authorities still insist on cambering our roads and corners to a far greater extent than is necessary. These roadways, sloping from the centre to the side walk at an angle, in some cases, of fifteen or more degrees, especially at bends, corners and sharp turns, not only waste a big area of road space which ought to be appropriated by road users, but create conditions which lead to accidents which, with proper up-to-date road building, could, to a very great extent, be prevented.

WHEN CAMBERING WAS NECESSARY.

In the bygone days of the water-bound macadam roads, a cambered surface with a fall of anything up to twelve inches was necessary to carry the rain off the roads to the gulley or channel ways at either side. To-day, with a waterproof binding such as tar, bitumen or similar preparations, a camber or slope of two to three inches in an eighteen foot roadway is quite sufficient to take the water to the sides and give the necessary grip to motor vehicles travelling at a fast rate.

A heavily cambered road has the effect of driving the motorist to the right centre of the road in order that he may avoid driving his car at a dangerous angle and shifting the centre of gravity of his car to his near side. Driving on a road of this character not only means considerable discomfort to the driver and those in the car and extra wear of his near-side pair of tyres, but difficult and tricky steering. The result is considerable waste of road space, the near side of the roadway, owing to its slope, being used only when two cars are proceeding abreast or one car passing another. There are, unfortunately, some motorists who refuse to give way to following traffic, and the consequence is that those following must either wait the pleasure of the selfish drivers or cut out into the road of oncoming traffic.

Reducing the cambers of the highways to two or three inches will make every square yard of the road equally easy and pleasant to drive on, and the dangerous practice of drivers closely hugging the right centre of the road will give way to an intelligent user of the road and the consequent ease of traffic.

CAMBERED CORNERS.

Cambered surfaces at corners and bends are a very fruitful cause of accident, and our illustration, taken on the Howth road, near Killester village, indicates in some measure the danger that attaches to driving even at comparatively slow speeds around corners of cambered roads. The car at the right-hand side is in its proper position cornering, and its fairly stiff angle is noticeable. The car at the left-hand side is coming from the direction of Howth towards the city, and, to avoid the dip in the roadway, it has cut the corner, being within eight feet of the footway at its wrong side. Though the driver of this car is altogether in the wrong, he is following the general practice of motorists so as to avoid transferring the centre of gravity of a loaded car to his near side.

Super-imposed or banked-up corners have proved a remedy for corners so constructed. They have adopted this well-established practice in Brooklands and every other track of any importance. To so treat existing corners would not entail a very heavy expense, and motorists who now pay for the upkeep and construction of the highways are surely deserving of consideration in this matter. So far only one County Surveyor, Mr. Murphy, of Cork, has made bold to introduce this feature into his scheme of road-making, and the road which he has so treated, that from Cork to Mallow, is one of the safest and fastest highways in the State. His is an example that may be usefully followed by other road engineers in the Free State.

NEGOTIATING HILLS.

Novices frequently meet with the difficulty of the engine stalling when the car is climbing a steep incline. When this happens leave the clutch in and apply all the brakes with as little delay as possible. It is most unlikely that the car will then run back; but cars the brakes of which are deficient have been known to do so. In such a case the car should be brought close to the bank, kerb, wall or hedge on the side of the road nearest to which the car stops and backed against it at an acute angle. To re-start, first place chocks of some kind behind the rear wheels and then start the engine. Engage the first gear, at the same time accelerating the engine as the clutch is being let in, releasing the brakes at the same time.

OILING AN ENGINE.

Beyond adding lubricant to keep the oil up to the correct level in the engine, few owners take little interest in this very important contribution to the long and good service of their cars. The proper method of checking the oil level is by means of the dip-rod or float-operated gauge, after the car has been at a standstill on level ground for a few minutes after a run. The gauze or strainer of the oil-filling ope should never be removed—it is frequently done in order to get the job finished in the least time possible—because this strainer prevents foreign matter getting into the engine. The oil employed should be of a standard brand, and, if one uses the oils recommended by the makers of the car, he will do wisely. An unsuitable oil is not always cheaper than that which is recommended, the maker's recommendation being based on the most careful tests of viscosity and the temperature at which the engine normally operates.

Periodic draining and refilling of the sump is necessary, not because of any loss of oil, but owing to foreign substances getting into it. Water, a product of combustion, may get past the pistons of a cold engine, as may also some liquid petrol. Grit is drawn in through the carburetter and particles of carbon will in time mix with the oil, all of which reduces its value as a lubricant. The wise owner who desires to get the utmost service from his car will drain the oil from the sump and replace it every 2,500 or 3,000 miles. If the engine be drained when hot it will be very thin, and there will be no necessity of flushing the sump with paraffin oil, to do which nowadays is considered a very bad practice. Before refilling the filters should be cleaned in petrol.

SQUEAKS AND RATTLES.

There are few things more irritating to the driver than squeaks and rattles in his car, the causes of which are frequently very elusive; but, if a little trouble be taken in tracing the offending part, it will cut out a considerable discomfort in driving. The best plan to find the cause is to secure an assistant who can put his ear near to the suspected parts while the squeak is making itself heard. Another well-tried way is to coast the car down an incline with the engine stopped, which indicates whether the engine is the unruly section. If the noise continues during the coast the assistant can get about the car either where the engine is ticking over or stopped, and discover the squeaks.

Sometimes these squeaks do not make themselves heard except when the car is going at a good speed. In that case, when the helper cannot with safety occupy a position near the bonnet, the method of procedure is to get the car in the yard or garage and jump heavily on either running board and the floor of the car, when the noise will generally be reproduced and can be located.

PRATT'S HIGH TEST PETROL.

The fine performance of the Baby Austin cars in the Ulster Tourist Trophy Race was an excellent test of Pratt's new high test petrol for modern engines. The oil is distributed by the Irish-American Oil Company, Limited, which was the first company to be registered in the Free State. There are over 12,000 Irish shareholders in the company, representing a quarter of a million pounds of its capital.

KILLED BY 'BUS.

DUBLIN WOMAN'S EFFORT TO SAVE CHILD.

Dr. Louis A. Byrne, Dublin City Coroner, yesterday resumed the inquest on the child Michael Reilly, of 10 Quinn's cottages, North Strand, who was knocked down by a 'bus at North Clarence street last Sunday, and died in Jervis Street Hospital.

In returning a verdict that death was due to shock and hemorrhage, following extensive head injuries accidentally received, the Coroner commended the action of Miss Annie Hill, of Portland row, who rushed into the street and was endeavouring to bring the child to safety when she was knocked down and run over by the 'bus.

The driver of the 'bus had been charged in the District Court, but informations were refused.

LIGHTHOUSE MAN'S DEATH.

ACCIDENT AT THE BASE OF EDDYSTONE.

An inquest was held at Plymouth yesterday on Arthur Edward Davies, aged 32, for five years assistant lighthouse-keeper on Eddystone Lighthouse.

Charles Cherrett, principal keeper at the lighthouse, said that on August 9th he, together with Davies and another assistant, were at the base of the lighthouse. Davies had been fishing. As they were returning to the tower a fishing boat approached, and the skipper offered them some fish. The boat came alongside and left some fish.

Cherrett added that he went to the entrance of the lighthouse and lowered a bucket, into which Davies put the fish. When the bucket was hoisted Davies started to climb the steps, and was about to grasp a step above him when he slipped, overbalanced and struck his head on a rock. The blow must have stunned him. Cherrett threw a lifebelt, but, although Davies was floating on his back, he neither spoke nor made any movement. A small boat from the fishing vessel rowed to the spot, but when a few yards distant Davies, who could not swim, sank.

A verdict of accidental death was recorded.

DUBLIN PORT AND DOCKS BOARD.

Mr. Charles McGloughlin presided at the meeting of the Dublin Port and Docks Board held yesterday.

A report was received from the Harbour Master regarding the arrest of a man named Walter Clark for the larceny of money and a gold chain, the property of the master and mate of the ss. Princetown, and of his subsequent conviction.

The Board commended the action of Constable Fitzpatrick for his promptitude in arresting Clark and recovering the property.

SLUGGISH LIVER? COATED TONGUE? UPSET STOMACH? SICK HEADACHES?

Try a pinch of this IN YOUR TEA EVERY MORNING for one week. A quick, sure, pleasant and perfectly natural cure.

Most of the ordinary ills are always caused by self-poisoning. Auto-intoxication the medical men call it. Liver and kidney poisons, known as toxins, are drawn into the blood, through the thousands of absorbent intestinal glands. These excite the heart, also clog the liver, kidneys and other organs. As the heart pumps faster, the blood pressure increases, and congestion occurs in the small veins of the head, so throbbing and shooting pains are felt, also you may feel those gnawing, grinding pains in the back, over the fouled kidneys. You experience mental and physical languor, dizziness, feverishness, insomnia, and despondency. Food nauseates, breath and taste are bad in the morning, complexion becomes sallow and broken out. You are in a receptive state for any disease. But don't resort to any habit-forming heart depressants, with their harmful reactions. Acetanilide, aspirin, bromides or other "headache powders," also bowel-wracking physics, are only temporary expedients and never cure.

W. G. East.

Ask your chemist for a few ounces of refined Alkia Saltrates, a compound which in its pure state gives you a reproduction of the solvent, eliminative and curative properties found in famous medicinal spring waters. As much of this as can be heaped on a sixpence should be dissolved in your tea, coffee, water or other drink, and taken every morning. No trace of any bitter, salty, sour, or other taste can possibly be detected. This simple precaution renders ordinary life impossible, serious diseases improbable, and increases your bodily and mental efficiency, so you at once begin to enjoy life as Nature intends you should.

Books of the Week

THE LITERATURE OF NATURE.

ALL lovers of the beauty that is to be seen in our fields, woods and hedges will welcome the delightful little book (of not more than 150 pages) in which Mr. Edmund Blunden has set himself to refresh and enlarge such knowledge as his readers possess of what our great writers, whether in prose or verse, have had to teach us on that very engrossing theme.

Mr. Blunden's aim (in his own words) has been "to encourage those who have an inclination to read, and be pleased with, some of the many books which have been written in England to the glory of Nature in various views, homely or imaginative," and "to call attention to merit here and there which, according to my feeling, has not been rewarded with appreciation." Under both headings the author has told us much for which thanks are his due. He has been careful not to overdose us with the most familiar names, and has, in fact, purposely omitted some great masters—Chaucer and Browning among them—on the ground of their requiring larger treatment, to be given, perhaps, in a future work.

On the whole, it is the poets, rather than writers who have made prose their medium, that Mr. Blunden passes before us in his kindly, though not at all times adulatory, review. Beginning with an enthusiasm that surely all lovers of Nature must share for that magnificent "Ode to Evening" for which William Collins will be remembered and loved as long as the English language endures, he is less elaborate in what he has to say of Keats, and seems at times almost amusingly sorrowful over something like a falling away from their first splendour as Nature-poets which distinguished the maturer days of Wordsworth, of Tennyson, and of Matthew Arnold. In fine relief stands out John Clare, with his "long life of unselfish, uncopied nature-poetry," of which many delightful extracts—all too little known—are given; while, perhaps, the most absorbing chapter in the book is one entitled "The Farmer's Boy," which has for its subject the lives and verses of two self-taught and now forgotten working-class poets, Stephen Duck and Robert Bloomfield. Here, assuredly, Mr. Blunden well fulfil his mission of calling attention to merit that has not been fairly appreciated. Of Irish poets he has little, indeed, to say, but he cannot help noticing that with Goldsmith "the bittern and lapwing are made into mere signs of hard times," and no hint is given that they are capable of awaking some interest. We are now trying to preserve both from extermination.

Among prose-writers Mr. Blunden singles out but a few for appreciation—Gilbert White coming naturally at the top, while his correspondent, Thomas Pennant, is marshalled, too, to a high place; but among the very few other prose-works calling for notice we may say that neither Kingsley nor Scott is so much as named—Mr. Blunden selects for special praise a book of which he tells us he "cannot find" the name of the author—a book entitled "Episodes of Insect Life," produced about the middle of the last century by an "agreeable gentleman who is content to call himself 'Acheta Domestica,'" and who discusses with amazing minuteness and humour the ways and fashions of an extraordinary number of British insects.

* * * * *

"The Episodes," says Mr. Blunden, "make a book which, from the point of view of a peaceful patriot, I would as soon possess as the original edition of 'In Memoriam,'" and "in any other country than ours, so rich beyond the dreams of avarice" in splendid prose and verse, a pen like Acheta Domestica's would be considered something to crow about." After such high praise it can hardly be unfair for a reviewer to impart the information that Mr. Blunden regrets his inability to obtain. The "agreeable gentleman" who wrote as "Acheta Domestica" was, in fact, a lady—a Miss Lydia Martha Budgen, a member of a family who were long well known in Co. Wexford, though we are afraid that she cannot herself be claimed as of Irish birth. Her book, of which we have seen only one copy—though passages from it are extensively quoted in Mary Howitt's "Pictorial Calendar of the Seasons"—no doubt, has been long out of print; but so long as the spirit that animated that bright "chirping cricket" survives—and a perusal of Mr. Blunden's pages should, on that point, yield quite sufficient evidence—the literature of our islands will not lack the charm that has steadily distinguished it through all ages—the charm of that "companionship with Nature" which found itself personified in "Acheta Domestica," and which Mr. Blunden claims as a special inheritance of our race.

MODERN POETRY.

MR. D. H. LAWRENCE calls his new poems "Pansies" because they are rather "Pensées than anything else," and he has preferred to present these thoughts in poetry rather than in prose because "there is a didactic element about prose thoughts which makes them repellent, slightly bullying." This is good self-criticism, for the chief fault to be found in him as a novelist is that his philosophy is imposed arbitrarily on his work rather than fused with it. In his new poems, passion or thought are more evenly balanced by the discipline of form and rhythm.

Like many another poet Mr. Lawrence rails against the existing order of things, but his railings are vigorously precise and do not bear the rather vague and loose comparisons which at a first glance suggest themselves to the reader. Broadly speaking, he attributes the general rottenness of life to man's self-imposed civilisation and culture, and looks to a more earthy, less self-conscious phase to rid us of our complexes. Only a careful study of his poems, however, can give a true understanding of his very carefully defined attitude.

As a plant becomes pot-bound,
Man becomes ego-bound,
Enclosed in his own limited mental consciousness.

Then he can't feel any more
Or love or rejoice or even grieve any more,
He is ego-bound,
Pot-bound
In the pot of his own conceit,
And he can only slowly die

Unless he is a sturdy plant.
Then he can burst the pot,
Shell off his ego
And get his roots in earth again—
Raw earth.

Here is his virile conception of living and of work:

There is no point in work
Unless it absorbs you
Like an absorbing game.

If it doesn't absorb you,
If it's never any fun
Don't do it.

When a man goes out into his work
He is alive like a tree in spring,
He is living, not merely working.

On a first reading of these poems one is inclined to pay more attention to the intellectual, rather than the poetical, side of Mr. D. H. Lawrence's work. Later, his rhythms and his fresh, vigorous diction grow upon us.

THE COUNTRYSIDE OF ENGLAND.

AN ambitious but entirely worthy object is that of the County Anthologies, in which, as Mr. R. Pape Cowl tells us in his general preface, an attempt will be made to survey and illustrate the debt of English literature to the scenery and special genius of individual counties in the British Isles. Not a few of the counties have contributed royally to the regional literature; not one but some poet or prose-artist has sung its praises. The first volume of the series is devoted to Yorkshire, which, as Mr. G. F. Wilson, the editor, claims, might well be called an epitome of northern England. Drayton devoted the whole of his "Eight-and-Twentieth Song" in the "Polyolbion" to it; John Taylor, the water poet, included Hull in his travels; no reader of "Tristram Shandy" needs to be reminded of Coxwold; Ebenezer Elliott's fiery spirit was nurtured in the West Riding; and there, too, the Brontës plied their daily task, and added mighty stones to the cairn of English literature.

The two other volumes in the series are "Derbyshire," edited by Thomas Mault, whose anthology ranges from Scott to Herbert Spencer, in a charming bit of autobiography, and from Eliza Cook (not "Cooke") to Sacheverell Sitwell; while the third is devoted to "Lanarkshire," concerning which Mr. Hugh Quigley has made a notable collection of prose and verse. We hope the series will be extended until it includes the whole of the British Isles. If there be one criticism we would offer, it is that more attention should be paid to dialect writings. Tennyson's "Northern Farmer," Tim Bobbin, and some of George Eliot's raciest Warwickshire ought to be heard in future volumes.

Mr. Arthur Rees' volume is designed to give a picture in miniature of life in Sussex in the eighteenth, and a bit before and a bit after. The illustrated diary of Timothy Burrell, of Ockenden, is of particular interest, and Walter Gale, the Mayfield schoolmaster, is a character whom Fielding would have delighted to paint. Gale was passing rich on £16 a year, and eked out his pittance by measuring land, engraving tombstones, painting publichouse signs, making wills for the villagers who had anything to leave, and designing quilt and fancy-work patterns for the ladies. No matter how he was engaged, the story ends in "a mugge of old ale," or "two drams and three pints of fivepenny"; and when charged with being a drunken, saucy, covetous fellow, with neither breeding nor honesty, he allowed to being a little covetous, "but as to drunkenness and sauciness, it was utterly false." A great character was Walter Gale; we thank Mr. Rees for introducing him.

KING AND PATRIOT.

ANY book that treats of King Louis XI. of France hardly can fail to be interesting. If, therefore, we confine ourselves merely to saying that M. Champion's book is interesting, we easily may be guilty of an injustice. M. Champion has done much more than given us an interesting book: he has published a work which combines in it the art of the novelist and the scientific carefulness of the historian. Indeed, his admission, in the preface to the second French edition, makes quite clear for us what might otherwise have had to be a matter of guesswork on our part: "It is true that this book is written with passion, because the writer has been passionately interested in it. But his one object has been to find out truth and to express it in the simplest terms." Now we know why we found the perusal of it so engrossing and so delightful; and M. Champion has been equally fortunate in his translator and adapter. For his work, in its English dress, loses nothing of its value, and, perhaps, even gains somewhat in its power of seizing one's attention.

Who has not had his imagination kindled by the picture of King Louis, which Sir Walter Scott presents in "Quentin Durward"? With what an astute, unloving, unlovable character the great novelist endows him! We do not find that M. Champion makes him a lovable man or a noble monarch; but the author corrects many erroneous notions and renders incredible many of the tales which have circulated for centuries about the personal actions and habits, the political motives and ambitions, of Louis XI. of France.

Like M. Duclos, an English version of whose work was published in Dublin in 1746, the present writer is under the necessity of making a detailed investigation into the various opinions expressed concerning this king and his times. Like Duclos, he values the memoirs of Philippe de Commynes; like Duclos again, he perceives the faults and deficiencies of the kind of man Louis was, and yet is able to recognise the high qualities of his kingship. Unlike Duclos, however, whose historical candour gave offence to the French Church and State of his day, whereby an urgent prohibition of the work was issued, M. Champion will meet with nothing save appreciation for the care which he has bestowed upon the accuracy of his book and admiration for the manner in which he has delivered his narrative.

SIR WALTER RALEGH.

MISS LATHAM received a research grant from the Wakefield Education Committee in 1927, and the present volume is, presumably, part of the fruit of her labours. It contains: (i.) a most charmingly written introduction of 22 pages on the life and poetry of Walter Ralegh; (ii.) 42 poems (in the old spelling, a thing which will mar the pleasure of some readers), and (iii.) 80 pages of textual introduction and notes. For specialists in English literature the work is, we fancy, indispensable.

Irishmen have something to forgive and forget where Walter Ralegh is concerned; but when all is said and done he was, like so many of his fellow-countrymen, a very gallant gentleman. Two letters to his wife, written respectively in 1603 on the eve of his execution (as he believed when writing—he was in point of fact then reprieved, and was not executed till the autumn of 1618), and in 1617, after the ill-fated Guiana expedition in which their son was killed, are amongst the most moving things in history. Miss Latham's introduction, we repeat, is charming; it has sympathy, insight, grace and beauty.

In this interesting story of the varied fortunes of the Cancellors, a family of brewers, Countess Barcynska displays a notable gift of characterisation. Godfrey Cancellor, the respected member of Parliament, scandalises his relations by marrying his parlourmaid; but she is not of the ordinary type of domestic, and numbers titled notabilities among her friends. Fortune frowns on Janet when an old scandal is raked up, but the Cancellors have a trouble of their own to face before long. The happy ending, however, rights every wrong.

MR. LOCKE'S NEW NOVEL.

ANCESTOR JORICO, although his bones are dust long before the story opens, is the starting-point of a tale of adventure calculated to hold the reader's interest from the first page to the last. The group of people who take part in the search for the treasure of their remote kinsman differ widely in most respects, but one and all they are wonderfully individual personalities: Jones, the deaf and dumb soldier servant; Toby, the unwilling man milliner; Ruth, the superb woman whom both loved; Jane Crowe, a fine and tragic figure. These and the others who set out in Jane Crowe's yacht on their adventurous quest will make a deep impression on the reader's mind, and the many exciting incidents that fall to their lot will be read with breathless interest.

"SORRISTOWN, the old grey house, with windows winkered with creeper, looking through its beech trees, over its river and across the best of a fair hunting country to the blue hills," is the home of the Sorriers. Sir Ralph ("Roguey"), his sister Maeve, and younger brother Jer. Maeve, a fine handsome clean-minded girl, is soon to marry Major Rowland Fountani (Rowley), a neighbouring landowner, with whom she is very deeply in love in her quiet way. Roguey has not much to recommend him beyond a good figure and an exquisite pair of legs to show off hunting boots; Jer is a kindly soul, with a stammer and a Baby Austin car.

Into this home a week before the wedding comes, as a bridesmaid, Perilla Mary Fuller, the last word in modernity, beautiful, dainty and self-possessed; she could even get out of the car on the way to a meet, and "get sick, neatly and efficiently, behind a furze-bush." But with all her charm she has neither morals nor honour. All the men are attracted by her; Jer is her loyal platonic friend, but she only wants Rowley, and works havoc in the lives of the Sorristown folk without remorse.

The scene is laid in the County "Westcommon." There are very vivid accounts of hunts and some beautiful descriptions of the soft Irish winter landscape. The author is a daughter of "Moira O'Neill."

THE title of this book is taken from a quotation from R. L. S.: "To keep a few friends and these without capitulation," and exactly expresses what the heroine did. Rachel Dalton was so determined to be absolutely honest that "all her life she gave friends and admirers grounds of belief in her, but she also supplied her detractors with plenty of handles against her." Rachel, in spite of the disapproval of her husband's parents—"such an alliance was a break with all our traditions"—she was only the daughter of a "Brand new Peer"—proved herself worthy of Arthur Lowford's belief in her. The characters are admirably drawn. Mr. Lowford, senior, "selfish where not interested," and Mrs. Lowford, who had both sympathy and insight, and who continued to enumerate her blessings, which were many and solid, and the habit helped her to become more conscious of their number and less conscious of her needs. The story is told with dignity and distinction, and the writing is so excellent it is to be regretted that the clumsy form of phraseology "did not have" has been so often used.

MR. L. Patrick Greene's "Major," that dandy of the veldt with his monocle and his passion for dressing for dinner by the camp fire in the wilderness, has become by this time almost as well-known to fiction readers as the late lamented "Raffles," whom, indeed, he resembles in many respects. The six chapters of the present volume are really six complete stories, but the same characters figure in all of them, and there is a thread of continuity almost sufficiently pronounced to justify the appellation "plot." It is rather difficult to believe in the Major when Mr. Greene depicts him as a "dude," but when the hero sheds his Victorian affectations and settles down to the business of being heroic we are given a rattling good story with local colour such as could be supplied only by a man who knew his South Africa thoroughly. Jim, the Hottentot servant and companion, is an excellently drawn character.

IN her delightful new novel Sophia Cleugh mixes the conventional ingredients of fiction after a method that is her own special secret. Adventure that has far-reaching consequences falls to the lot of the Dunstable family during their holiday in Italy, and rare resource and acumen are displayed in the face of danger by Gilliflower, Larkspur, and that intrepid eight-year-old knight, Sweet William. When cousin Hugh, from America, joins the party and "falls for" the woeful little Contessina who has been condemned to an ill-assorted betrothal, and, in her extremity, has been taken under the watchful protection of the young Dunstables, they find an ideal rescuer to their hand, and that Gilliflower's own romance is thereby enabled to blossom is all to the good.

MOST detective novel "fans" want to be allowed to play the detective themselves, and it is because Mr. Milward Kennedy bears this more in mind in his construction of "Corpse Guard Parade" than he did in his earlier and quite excellent "Corpse on the Mat" that we prefer his more recent shocker. Everyone has his own theory of what constitutes the best type of detective fiction, and Mr. Kennedy may be criticised for drawing too many red herrings across the trail, as well as for making his Scotland Yard official too slow and plodding and his amateurs too intuitive. Yet, though many will guess the identity of the murderer at an early date, most readers will be as baffled as the characters in the book by the method in which the crime was enacted.

MR. HAROLD BINDLOSS'S tales of Canadian life and adventure are always fresh and entertaining. His latest is a splendid yarn that never flags, from the moment that Lawrence Bethune, the young rancher, finds a fair Unknown asleep under a cedar tree, and makes her difficulties his own. Alice Thorne, stranded in a far country through the collapse of the little musical troupe that she had joined, has reason to thank her lucky star that she falls into such capable and trustworthy hands; but peril and excitement in the strenuous land of the settlers are met with before a satisfactory winding-up is reached.

THE chief merit of Sarah Gertrude Millin's new novel is the restrained simplicity with which she unfolds a rather sordid and not very interesting or complex domestic tragedy. The story is one which might easily be handled in a vein of sickly sentiment and exaggerated romance. Actually the author curbs any temptation she may have felt to indulge in such histrionics, and deserves praise for her restraint. She does not succeed, however, in making the passion of Jennie Mars for Matthew the fiddler seem very real to us. The scene is laid in Portuguese East Africa, and the descriptions lend atmosphere to an otherwise rather colourless tale.

TWO BOYS AND A MOTOR CAR.

FATHERS TO PAY.

The adjourned case, in which Inspector Dunleavy charged two boys, Robert Buchanan and Fred R. Dixon, with smashing a motor car, the property of Mr. Hilliger, Beechgrove, Dundrum, at Leinster square, Rathmines, on August 21, was resumed.

At the previous hearing evidence was given that the car was left outside a house in Leinster square, and while the owner was away the two boys got in and started it—"to have a run up and down the square," as they subsequently stated. When the car had travelled about one hundred yards it got out of control and ran into a wall, and was damaged to the extent of £10 10s.

When the case was called

The father of each defendant appeared, and stated that they had agreed to make good the cost of the repairs.

BOY ACCUSED.

A boy, Michael McGrath, was charged with opening gas meters in the house, 2 Temple lane, where he resides, and stealing a sum of £1 4s. 8d.

Sergeant 18 B stated that, when charged and cautioned, the defendant said that he opened the meters, and spent the money which he had taken on pleasure.

An official of the Gas Company stated that there was a shortage of £1 4s. 8d. in two meters in the house.

ALLEGED THEFT FROM CHURCH.

ACCUSED MAN REMANDED.

Michael Dunne, of no business and no fixed address, was charged by Sergeant 18 D with entering the Roman Catholic Church, Arbour hill, the previous night, and taking the sum of 8s. 8½d. from the money box attached to a shrine.

The sergeant stated that the defendant was handed over to him by a soldier, who was acting as church orderly. Dunne admitted breaking open the box and taking the money. He added that at one time he was in the Free State Army, and had acted as church orderly during the period. Since then he had taken money from the box on five occasions. When searched he had in his possession a key which opened the door of the church, a penknife, and 8s. 8½d. in coppers.

Daniel Connell, of the Army Air Force, stated that he found the accused man coming out of the church that morning. Witness took him in charge, and handed him over to the sergeant.

A remand for seven days was granted.

DRINK BLAMED.

TRAVELLER CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT.

Detective Officers Wyer and Madden charged James F. A. Murphy, traveller, of Mountjoy street, with having, during the month of July, embezzled the sum of £8 17s. 6d., entrusted to him for his employers, Messrs. Siemens Schuckert (Ireland), Ltd., 43 Upper Sackville street. He also was charged with being in possession of demonstration appliances, valued at £14, the property of the firm.

Mr. J. Cawley (instructed by Messrs. Jas. O'Connor and Co.) defended.

A number of witnesses were examined to prove that they bought electrical appliances from the defendant, who was an agent for the firm. The total value of the goods was £8 17s. 6d.

A book-keeper for the firm said that this money had not been returned to the office by the defendant. He was entitled to salary and commission amounting to £3 11s. 10d., leaving £5 5s. 8d. due. He had not returned to the offices the demonstration appliances, for which he was responsible.

Mr. Cawley said that the cause of the trouble was drink, and the defendant had no guilty intent. He would pay back the £5 5s. 8d., and would return the demonstration goods, or what he had of them, because he had, with the knowledge of the company, handed over some of them to sub-agents. He would pay cash for any of the articles which he might not be able to recover.

The Justice bound the defendant over for six months on his wife's bail of £20 on paying back to the company £5 5s. 8d. He made no rule on the second charge, the defendant undertaking to return the demonstration goods or their value.

INSURANCE POLICIES.

COLLECTOR RETURNED FOR TRIAL.

The hearing was resumed of the charge against Francis McMahon, no address, who had been a collector for the Refuge Assurance Company, 105 St. Stephen's Green.

Detective Officer O'Connor explained that the accused man was charged with converting to his own use the sum of £23 odd, which he was alleged to have collected on behalf of the Refuge Company. In July last the defendant disappeared, but he was arrested in Carlow.

Evidence was given by a number of witnesses that they had taken out insurance policies with the Refuge Assurance Company, and had paid premiums to the above amount to the defendant.

The defendant was returned for trial to the Circuit Court.

UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFIT.

(BEFORE MR. E. J. LITTLE.)

The Free State Minister for Industry and Commerce summoned Teresa Cullen, 54 Lower Mount street, for unlawfully, for the purpose of obtaining unemployment benefit under the Unemployment Insurance Acts, 1920 to 1926, making false representation that she was unemployed during the period February 11 to 25, and obtaining the sum of £1 6s.

Mr. Clarke, solicitor, prosecuted, and Mr. J. V. Brady defended.

SALE OF COAL.

Inspector S. H. Abbott summoned John Sammon, 15 Fleming road, for offering for sale four bags of coal, representing 10 stone weight each, which proved to be deficient in weight 24lb.

Mr. Abbott having given evidence, a fine of 10s., with £1 costs, was imposed.

Mr. Abbott also summoned Mrs. Ellen Nolan, Lower Palmerston, Chapelized, for offering for sale eleven bags of coal without having prescribed metal discs attached giving the weight of each bag.

A fine of 10s., with 10s. costs, was imposed.

Mr. H. Bonass, solicitor for the Corporation, prosecuted.

The annual rate of mortality in England and Wales during the week ended August 24th averaged 8.9 per 1,000.

THE PROBLEM OF PALESTINE.

II.—THE ARAB MOVEMENT AND THE BALFOUR DECLARATION.

(By CULLEN TYNAN.)

FEW people foresaw that the shot fired on a certain June afternoon in Sarajevo was to turn Europe into a huge charnel-house. None foresaw the immense consequences which, in the Near East, followed and are still to follow that act.

Palestine, in the summer of 1914, was to all appearances a forgotten country. Except in the eyes of the religious world, except in the minds of half-a-dozen statesmen, and except in the ever-present thoughts of the exiled Hebrews, the country had been relegated to an unenviable and unimportant position amongst the nations of the world. Dominated by the Turks for almost five centuries, pillaged and ravaged by hordes of invaders before that, it was virtually a country where Time had stood still.

The inhabitants were still living in the conditions that prevailed in the time of Abraham. A nation of husbandmen, they had, for the most part, no settled home. Compelled by lack of water to wander from place to place, so that their flocks might browse upon the sparsely-scattered patches of dry grass on hillside and in valley, their lives were spent in the open, and they themselves were almost entirely illiterate. Even where there were settled communities throughout the country, age-old customs survived.

In the villages the people still tilled their stony patch of ground with a wooden ploughshare and pounded the meagre crop of grain by hand between two flat stones. There was still the same struggle for existence, the same losing fight against sandstorms and sickness and the border raiders. With the exception of Jerusalem, the more important towns—less than half-a dozen in all—were simply places where it was possible to worship and to make small purchases in the bazaar or in the markets. There were no industries, and, except for the tourist traffic, virtually no commercial life. The only portions of the country which showed any apparent sign of progress were the widely-separated and tiny hamlets occupied by the Jews who had been admitted to the country from Europe and elsewhere towards the end of the nineteenth century.

A NATION IN BONDAGE.

These settlers—vastly outnumbered by the Arab and Syrian element, both Christian and Moslem—formed only a very small proportion of the population, which also included Circassians, Bosnians, Magharbah, Druses, and other sects and tribes, of which the Samaritans—the last representatives of the ancient House of Israel living in the country continuously—were an almost extinct race, numbering in all less than two hundred souls.

A nation in bondage, composed of representatives of many races, divided in outlook, religion and character, Palestine in 1914 was, nevertheless, united on one point. Turkish oppression, heavy taxation and the impoverished state of the people had helped to develop national tendencies to such an extent that the whole country, and the countries bordering on it, became violently anti-Turkish in thought and outlook.

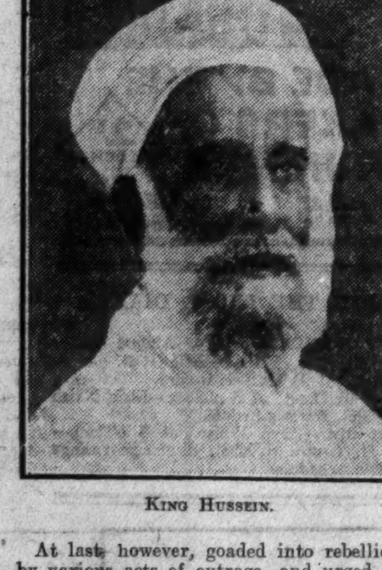
A few years previously a movement, which has since come to be known as the Arab Movement, had begun. It was not confined to Palestine alone, but influenced the whole of the Arabian peninsula, and made itself felt as far north as Kurdistan, and as far east as Persia.

The Young Turk Revolution of 1908, and the subsequent disruption of relations between the Arabs and Turks in Syria and Arabia, helped to develop this anti-Turkish feeling, so that when the war clouds burst upon Europe six years later, the antagonism against the Ottoman Empire was general and widespread. Finally, the entry of Turkey into the war gave the last needed impetus to the Arab Renaissance. At the outbreak of hostilities the Turks, prompted by Germany, made every attempt to incite the Moslem world to declare a Holy War on the Christians. To counteract the possible consequences of these efforts, the Allies, seeing in the Arab Movement an instrument, and knowing that their own aims could only be aided by the friendship and help of the Arabs, evolved a plan which, designed to further the Allied cause, embraced also the fulfilment of the Arab aspirations.

THE ARAB REVOLT.

It was realised at the outset that the success of this scheme—which was not to increase the fighting strength of the Allied forces so much as to cause disaffection amongst the Arab ranks in the Turkish Army—depended solely on the attitude of the Moslem world. To secure the necessary co-operation, the British authorities in Egypt entered into correspondence with Hussein, Sherif of Mecca, and a member of a kingly family, who, while not actually the religious head of the Mohammedan faith, held within his domain all that was sacred in the world of Islam.

Hussein at first was suspicious and not a little afraid. The Turks were his masters, bodies of troops were quartered throughout his kingdom, and he was not at all certain as to whether the Allies, with their sanguine proposals, were really going to win the war.



KING HUSSEIN.

At last, however, goaded into rebellion by various acts of outrage, and urged by the leaders of the Arab Movement on all sides, he consented to do whatever lay within his power.

Supplied with money and arms by the British, he and his sons, Faisal and Abdullah, collected together a band of wild fighters from the desert, and raised the standard of revolt. The Turks, without a definite front, and occupying widely-separated and insecure outposts throughout Arabia, were helpless. Almost two thousand miles separated them from Turkey. Their only means of communication with Constantinople was by way of the railway from Medina to Damascus, a light-gauge, single-track that ran through otherwise impassable country. Compelled at all costs to keep in touch with their bases in the north, they concentrated on guarding that single line. This was exactly what the British desired them to do. An Allied army had just landed at the Dardanelles. The revolt in Arabia, and the necessity of guarding the sole Turkish line of communication there, meant that large bodies of the reserve troops of the Turkish Army could not be employed on the Peninsula, since they were most urgently required in the Near East.

LAWRENCE OF ARABIA.

Faisal and his men, led by Colonel Lawrence, saw to it that the Turkish soldiery got no rest. Travelling by night with local guides, who knew every inch of the ground, they descended each dawn on a different point of the railway-line, blew up a section and galloped away into the desert. Occasionally they varied their tactics by mining a culvert, waiting for, and then blowing up, a troop-train, or attacked posts garrisoned by the railway troops. By these pin-pricking and irritating tactics they kept a considerable army away from the western theatre of war.

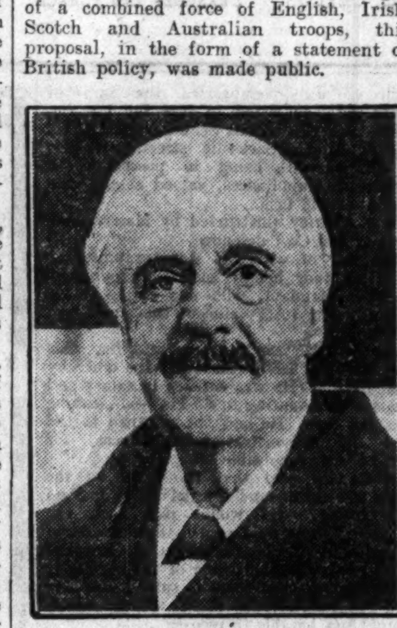
Meanwhile, in Palestine, the British Army under Allenby was advancing rapidly northwards. The Allied cause in Europe was, however not progressing so favourably. In Russia the army had collapsed, and there was evidence that the morale of the other Allied armies was none too good. There was a clear need for some stupendous effort, some world gesture which would awaken to action the available, but defeated, soldiery of Russia and Poland, and, at the same time, cause disruption among the armies of the Central Powers.

Throughout the world at the time, there were some fifteen millions of Jews, and of these a large proportion were serving, or had actually served, in the belligerent armies, while the remainder, exiled in neutral countries, formed an untapped and potential source of strength or weakness to the Allied cause.

Whether or not it was this factor, or the fact that Britain was still, as at the beginning of the century, intent on helping the Jews to attain their age-old dream, is a question that will never be answered. The moment was propitious. The Zionist leaders had already (October, 1916) submitted to the British Government a programme for the resettlement of Jews in Palestine "in accordance with the aspirations of the Zionist movement," and, in the following July, a formula for the proposed declaration was presented, but, after discussion, was substituted by an alternative proposal drafted by the Government itself.

THE JEWISH NATIONAL HOME.

On November 2nd, 1917, five weeks before Jerusalem fell before the onslaught of a combined force of English, Irish, Scotch and Australian troops, this proposal, in the form of a statement of British policy, was made public.



THE EARL OF BALFOUR.

Now known as the Balfour Declaration, it stated that "His Majesty's Government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of a National Home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavours to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

The immediate effect of the publication of this document was hardly noticeable in Europe. It is true that two battalions of Jews were added to the British Army, and that these units proceeded at once to Palestine to share in the fighting. (Shown in the Army List under the title of the 38th and 39th Royal Fusiliers, they promptly became known throughout the forces as the "Royal Jewsiliers," a name bestowed, in all good humour, by their Christian, but unchristianlike comrades of other units).

The effect which the Balfour Declaration produced in the Near East was, however, entirely different. The British successes, and the gradual breaking up of the Turkish Empire, had, throughout the campaign, been watched by the Moslem world with eager and anxious eyes. Victory for the Allied cause meant the overthrow of the Turkish yoke, and implied, as a reward for the part the Arabs had played in the war, freedom, full possession of their own lands, and the establishment of a Confederation of Arab Nations.

THE SYKES-PICOT AGREEMENT.

The Balfour Declaration, giving as it did a foothold in Palestine to another race of people, promised none of these things. Disappointed as they were, however, the Arabs were not prepared for a second and greater disappointment.

Scarcely had the text of the Balfour Declaration been made public before the particulars of a secret pact, effected a year previously between France and England, was revealed by the Bolshevist espionage system. The authors of this pact were Sir Mark Sykes, the orientalist and traveller, and M. Francois Picot, sometime French Consul at Damascus. Acting on behalf of their respective governments, they formulated, in May, 1916, an agreement by which, in the event of the Allies winning the war, Palestine, Syria, Irak, Trans-Jordan, the Mosul Vilayet, and certain territories in Arabia, were to come under the jurisdiction of Britain and France.

The text of this secret arrangement—now known as the Sykes-Picot Agreement—referred to the future Palestine as "an international (brown) zone of administration, whose form shall be decided after consultation with Russia, and subsequently with the other Allies and representatives of the Sherif of Mecca."

The publication of the document, following as it did the publication of the Balfour Declaration, dashed the hopes of the Arabs to the ground. The war, which was to bring them so much, was virtually at an end, and Allied armies, perfectly equipped and ready for each and every emergency, over-ran their lands. To them it seemed that they had but changed one master for another, and, in doing so, lost more than they had gained.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY.

The Blackberry Season : The Irish Players : The Glencree Valley. Intelligence Tests : A New Playhouse : A Dodder Park. Sir Richard Steele : Thought-Reading.

Blackberries.

The blackberry season has come again, and many a rambler by the hedgerows will refresh himself with that most delicious of wild fruits, and many an urchin will come home with purpled mouth after eating far too freely of them. If you pluck, and eat as you pluck, it is hard to stop; you simply don't feel yourself getting away with them. Strangely enough in the western counties there is a kind of prejudice against eating the blackberry, as though what is given without cost is not worth while. They make lovely dishes with cream, and succulent jams; but the western folk leave them to the birds. I remember in Clare a while ago, there was a man who persuaded the schoolchildren to pluck blackberries for him. He gave them tins and paid them a penny a tin full. Both parties were satisfied; the lads with their pennies for sweets, the man with the profits he made when he got the fruit to market. It looks very much as though those country folk are throwing away the advantages of a seasonal industry.

Sun Baths in London Parks.

Since Mr. George Lansbury became First Commissioner of Works, usually an office not much in the limelight, he has set about effecting a transformation in London's parks. "I want to do away with all unnecessary restrictions," he has said, "and to make London parks free for everybody." The "Keep Off the Grass" notices will be the first to go, and then all railings which can safely be removed will go also. He says he would like to have the parks open all night, but is afraid he dare not do it because of the possible public outcry. This is probably the first time that George Lansbury has confessed himself timorous of public opinion.

MR. G. LANSBURY.

He is considering the possibility of mixed bathing in the Serpentine, now used only by men, because of the absence of dressing facilities, and is of the opinion that neat bathing tents might be ornamental. "Nor is there anything in sitting on the banks in bathing-suits," he has said. "If it is not wrong on the Lido, why should it be wrong in Hyde Park?" He would like to accede to a request of the Sunlight League to permit sun-bathing in the parks; but, as he says, "What is the use of sun-bathing if you wear anything?"

A boating lake for children has just been completed in one park as part of a scheme for providing work for the unemployed, and sand-pits for the youngsters are being provided as quickly as possible. In Dublin it may not be possible to imitate all Mr. Lansbury's schemes, but we could, at least, have bathing pools more plentifully supplied, and we could have on our existing ponds those little paddle-boats, in which English children find so much pleasure. Not nearly enough is done here to provide places where children may play, and our Public Works Board might assist.

A Dodder Park.

The stretch of the River Dodder from the Dartry Dye Works, or even lower down, from Milltown Bridge, to Orwell Bridge, it seems to me, would provide an excellent centre for a public park. I walked along by the banks of the river some days ago, when the sun was at its warmest, and, truly, the place was a little haven of quiet and beauty. On either side of the banks stretches, not alone wide footpaths, but also bordering them, expanses of green fields. What a boon it would be to residents of the locality, particularly about the Milltown and Churchtown districts, were this place transformed into a park. Especially so when it is considered that there are no parks in the vicinity. Already the grassy borders of the river are being popularised by many people, but there is great danger to the young people, as no protection is afforded at the banks of the river, and it would be quite an easy matter to lose one's foothold when venturing too near.

Intelligence Tests.

My note on "Intelligence Tests" has induced a reader to send me a catchy problem which was set to the boys of an English grammar school on the eve of their vacation. It is a new idea to suggest that schoolboys should work during holidays, but an inducement was offered in the shape of a monetary prize.

The problem is as follows:—

"If six cows eat up a field of growing grass in three days, and three cows can eat it up in seven days, in how many days can one cow eat it up."

At first sight it looks rather simple, but in the problem as set the word "growing" was italicised, and therein lies the catch. Now you will see that complications may arise outside the calculations of the examiners, and the problem seems to be a test of imagination.

As the feat will take one cow somewhere between two and three weeks, the rate at which the grass will grow will depend upon the rainfall and the nature of the soil. Then one would like to know the age and weight of the cow, and other factors also arise, so that if any of my readers are going to attempt the problem, my advice to them is to buy a field and a cow and time it with a stop-watch.

A New Playhouse.

On the twelfth of August this year, when the purple Scottish moors were noisy with the sound of guns, many of Edinburgh's picture-goers attended the grand opening performance in the city's newest picture house, built specially to accommodate the "talkies," and to allow the voices to be heard clearly in every part of the building—stalls, balcony and upper circle.

A large queue composed of the general public waited outside, while part of the "private view" was in progress before an invited audience of over two thousand people, and, when the streams of satisfied ones began to flow out through the various exits, a Dublin picture "fan" was struck by their attitude towards those who still waited to go in. As the home-goers passed along beside the queue, many of them spoke in the friendliest way to people who were complete strangers, including the Irish exile. "You are going to have a rare treat," they said, encouragingly; "it's well worth waiting for"; and tired shoulders straightened themselves, and tired feet grew less weary.

Inside, the huge building had none of the elaborate decorations one now associates with picture houses; the walls were perfectly plain, and the orange-shaded lights made the only splash of colour.

Origin of "Tram."

I read in a newspaper to-day that the term "'tram" derived its designation from Mr. Outram, an American, who installed the original street car service at Birkenhead.

It is true that the first street system of public conveyance on rails in England was established in that city some years after its inception in New York. Mr. Outram, however, did not instal the Birkenhead service; nor was he an American. The term "'tram-way"—abbreviation of "Outram-way"—had been applied to vehicles running on flanged wheels and rails, long 'ere the device was adapted to passenger carriages.

Outram, after many experiments, perfected this method of transport, which derived its name from him—the inventor. Mr. Benjamin Outram was a Briton, and he lived at Butterly Hall, near Melbourne, in Derbyshire. He was the father of Sir James Outram, the distinguished soldier of Indian Army fame—but that is another story.

The prosperous market-gardening district of Melbourne is also famed as the birthplace of another pioneer of passenger transport, but on a much bigger scale—Mr. Thomas Cook, founder of the world-wide travel agency.

What Station ?

The train dragged through the rain into the station. Doors slammed, passengers alighted; there was all the bustle of entraining and detraining. An anxious face appeared at one of the windows, and a voice called: "Porter!" "Sir?" "What station is this?" "What station do ye want, sir?" "What stations have you got?" The train moved on; the perplexed official of the company standing upon the platform gazed with open mouth upon the receding face of the traveller, which glowed benevolently upon him like a red and setting sun.

The Glencree Valley.

The neighbourhood of the Glencree Valley, in the Dublin Mountains, is now a wild and bleak country, with only a few stunted trees where once stood a great forest. Remains of the ancient oak trees are still discovered in the bogs near Lough Bray, but once this whole region was a royal preserve, and the wardens had their work cut out for them to prevent poaching. In 1291, as exalted a personage as the Abbot of St. Mary's Abbey was charged with hunting in the forest with dogs and instruments of the chase. From here Queen Eleanor, wife of Edward I., obtained timber for building her castle at Haverford. But suddenly all records of the royal park cease, and it is presumed that it and its game were demolished by the Irish tribes living in the mountains about. Certain it is that these great tracts of forest were considered later as "nurseries of rebellion," and by the establishment of iron works in their vicinity, the surest method of bringing about their destruction was adopted.

Sir Richard Steele.

One of the greatest Anglo-Irish writers of the eighteenth century will be remembered on September 1st; for on that day two hundred years ago Sir Richard Steele died at Carmarthen. He was born in Dublin on the 12th March, 1672, the son of an attorney. After his father's death he had the good fortune to be commended by his maternal uncle, Henry Gascoigne, to the care of the Duke of Ormond, who had him educated at the Charterhouse in London. It was at the Charterhouse that he met Addison and formed that lifelong friendship which resulted in the brilliant collaboration of The Tatler and The Spectator. He wrote plays, only one of which, "The Liar," ever is heard of nowadays, but he built his fame on his essays, and, with Addison, established the high prestige of English journalism.

SIR R. STEELE.

As a politician, Steele was a Whig of somewhat extreme sympathies; for the violence of his language got him expelled from Parliament, and he sacrificed valuable preferment for his party allegiance. After the suppression of "the 15," he went to Scotland to serve in the partitioning-out of forfeited estates. At one time he held a patent for bringing salmon alive from Ireland to London. The portrait which I give is from the painting by Sir Godfrey Kneller.

From Politics to Coal Selling.

I see it announced that Sir Alfred Cope is again in Canada studying the market there with a view to increasing the export of Welsh anthracite to that country. At present most of the anthracite used in Canada comes from the State of Pennsylvania, U.S.A., and the agitation in Canada against the new American tariff makes the moment very opportune for a further effort to have Welsh coal substituted.

Sir Alfred Cope will be remembered as Assistant Under-Secretary in Dublin Castle during some of the most troubled years of that much-troubled building and institution. He remained in office practically until the end, and his memoirs may one day make piquant reading, should he care to commit them to paper. He knew everyone on both sides, and was on intimate terms with a considerable number of people in Dublin.

When he left Dublin Castle, he also left the Civil Service, and joined the staff of Mr. Lloyd George's Coalition Party Headquarters. Later he joined Lord Melchett, then Sir Alfred Mond, and it was through this association that he entered the coal business as managing-director of Amalgamated Anthracite Collieries, Ltd., the great selling agency for the Welch anthracite output. In this office he has succeeded in creating a marketing organisation which has increased the exports of South Wales anthracite very considerably. His previous visit to Canada in the beginning of this year resulted in large orders, and it is not unlikely that his present visit will make further inroads upon the Pennsylvanian export.

The Rotunda Hospital.

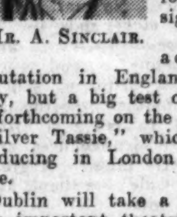
Lady HolmPatrick, I hear, has thrown herself heart and soul into the endeavour to make a success of the grand carnival which will be held to-day and to-morrow at Abbotstown, Castleknock. The event has been organised in aid of the Rotunda Hospital, and those who patronise the dramatic shows, concerts and dances will be helping a good cause. Dr. Bethel Solomons has received the most generous assistance, not only from Lord and Lady HolmPatrick, but from rich and poor in all quarters, and he is sanguine of achieving his aim of raising £25,000 for the better accomplishment of the hospital's beneficent work.

The Luggage.

He came from Derry, a well-known, uncouth figure, with a blunt, brusque manner which frightened people. He liked to frighten them; it amused him. He stayed one night in a certain hotel which he often visited, had his breakfast in the morning, and was preparing to depart when the spirit of devilment got hold of him. He had lost his luggage, he said. Anxious "boots," pallid porters, shivering chambermaids turned the hotel upside down amid a torrent of abuse, which did not spare the reception clerk or the manageress, who visibly wilted beneath the storm. He fumed, he threatened. It was useless. No one could find any luggage belonging to him; they could not remember his bringing it into the hotel; they dared not ask him to describe it. For about twenty minutes the tempest raged. Then his face began to beam. "Stop," said he, "I'm after findin' that I didn't lose me luggage at all, sure I had it in my pocket all the while." And out of the tail of his coat he produced—a toothbrush.

The Irish Players.

The Irish Players have, in recent years, made themselves very popular in the English provinces, and their visits to all the large towns are invariably patronised by very satisfactory audiences. With Mr. Arthur Sinclair and Miss Maire O'Neill as leaders, they are now touring with Mr. Sean O'Casey's popular play, "Juno and the Paycock," and the public interest in their performances shows no sign of falling off. Mr. O'Casey has achieved a big reputation in England mainly by this play, but a big test of his abilities will be forthcoming on the presentation of his "Silver Tassie," which Mr. Cochran is producing in London in a few week's time.



MR. A. SINCLAIR.

Dublin will take a special interest in this important theatrical event, because of the rejection of the play by the directors of the Abbey Theatre, and of the fierce controversy which raged in Dublin following the rejection.

Thought-reading.

The report from California of the death there of Mr. Zancig, the telepathist and mystificator, reminds me of the occasion on which, many years ago, I witnessed in London a performance by him. He was aided by his wife, and his performance excited a great deal of controversy, the interest waxing to such a point that he gave a demonstration, by command, to Edward VII. Some people were convinced that his mind really was attuned to that of his wife, and that thought-reading was really what occurred. As a matter of fact, an elaborate code was used. This involved the positing of questions in strange shapes, a habit which was attributed even by the most suspicious to foreign idiom. He had several devices, too, for gaining verisimilitude. A dress tie, for example, having been identified as a tie, he would reproachfully reject that interpretation, remarking, "a bow, rather, I think," so giving an impression of genuineness. It is curious, as a psychological observation, to remark that those who actually witnessed performances were persuaded against their will, and, by the very closeness of their attention, missed his method. The first man to suggest the true explanation never saw a performance, but only heard it described, together with a list of questions and answers, as they happened.

Centenarians.

A correspondent writes:—I see that a number of sanguine people in England have started a club, the members of which are pledged to do all in their power to reach the age of 100 years. It is not stated exactly how they propose to attain this object, but, if they follow the example of the majority of centenarians who have been interviewed as to how they did it, the club members are in for a very thin time. It would be hard to find a centenarian who did not say that he or she never touched alcoholic liquor, never smoked tobacco, and who did not hold strong views on the subject of short skirts and the ways of the modern young woman. I have known one exception; a Donegal man I met some years ago who lived to be 107. He was then about 100, and I found that, although he was usually a silent man, he became very communicative when a bottle of whiskey was produced. One glass, he asserted, would take ten years off him, and, indeed, I think if he had been given a free hand at the bottle he might have relapsed into infancy.

Some of the stories about centenarians need to be received with caution; I could never quite credit the tale from Buda-Pesth about the gentleman of 99 years who was rescued from the river after having attempted suicide and who explained his rash act by stating that he was no longer able to support his parents. It belongs, I fear, to the same category as the story about the lady who saw the fragile old man sobbing outside his door, and on inquiring the reason was told that he was weeping because his mother had just been beaten by his grandfather!

Viscount Living in a Stable.

The announcement that Viscount Loftus brought his pretty eighteen years old bride, whom he wed last year, to reside permanently at Ely Lodge, near Enniskillen, does not mean that the lodge is at present in existence. As a matter of fact, the lodge was taken down in 1872 by the Marquis of Ely of that time, with the intention of building a large and grander residence. The project was never carried out, as he had no son to succeed him. He, in turn, was succeeded by his brother, John Henry, an old Portoran, and he had no heir, and he was followed by his younger brother, the present Marquis. The only residence at present is the stables, which have been converted into a dwelling house, and have been furnished from the family home in England. Lord and Lady Loftus are very fond of Fermanagh. She was Miss Thea Gordon Gronvold, a Swede, and was but seventeen years old when she married Lord Loftus last year.

An "American Wake."

A correspondent writes:— Passing through Drogheda the other afternoon, I noticed a group of people on the railway station platform. A girl was playing an accordeon, and two young men and two young women were dancing "half sets." I asked a friend what it meant, and he said that he thought it was the winding up of an "American wake," and that they were dancing to fill up the time until the train arrived to take them either to Galway or Queenstown to catch the ship for America.

QUIDNUNC.

IN THE NORTHERN CAPITAL.

Trade Co-operation Between North and South : The Education Act : The Herring Fisheries : Disappointed Emigrants : Mr. Devlin and the Children.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Thursday Night.

AT the demonstrations of the Grand Black Chapter—a branch of the Orange Institution—to be held on Saturday at various Northern centres, the claims of trading within the Empire will be submitted. The Northern Minister of Labour will move a resolution to the effect that all loyal citizens should use their best efforts for the purpose of fostering the sale of Empire goods in Ulster, with a view to lessening the burden of unemployment. The policy of preference between the mother country and the colonies is also to be advocated, and, of course, local industry should provide a text for the speakers. The importance of this subject in its wider aspects is generally recognised, but the more intimate association between Northern and Southern Ireland calls for consideration.

It seems as if our leaders here had not the courage to suggest a campaign for the greater development of trade and commerce with their friends South of the border. Yet there is a great field for Northern manufactures in the Free State, while the South has also ample room to exploit its goods in the Six Counties. With co-operation much benefit might be derived by both States, and a great deal could be accomplished through the appointment by the two Governments of official trade representatives, or commercial ambassadors, in Dublin and Belfast. Nothing that makes for progress and prosperity should be neglected in these hard days, and the Irish people are in a position to help themselves by supporting one another, no matter what their political colours may be.

EDUCATIONAL CHANGES.

The Northern Ministry of Education has sent a letter to the various borough and regional committees asking for suggestions for changes of a non-controversial nature in connection with the promised bill to amend the Londonderry Education Act. It is refreshing to think that anything referring to education in the Six Counties could be non-controversial, in view of the conflicting interests involved and the opposition already offered to the suggested changes. The Government is pledged to make certain alterations, but it is hardly likely that all the demands made by those who advocate the complete recognition of "educational and religious interests" will be granted, as some contend that this would lead to the revival of the old system of clerical control.

No doubt, important concessions will be made, but the views of the existing educational authorities will have to be considered, and it is highly doubtful if the new scheme will be passed as a non-contentious measure. The matter came before the Londonderry Education Committee a few days ago, and the Dean of Derry, in commenting on the Ministry's letter, said that even the expression "non-controversial" was in itself highly controversial, because he did not think they could ever agree on what was controversial and what was not. He added that he had the greatest distrust of bureaucracy in every shape and form, and said that he thought that if the country went to the dogs it would simply be through being governed by offices. Interesting developments lie ahead.

NORTHERN FISHING INDUSTRY.

From time to time discussions take place with regard to the herring fisheries in Northern Ireland, and although the importance of this industry as a national asset is generally admitted, little or nothing is done to assist in its development. For this indifference the strange argument has been advanced that most of the steam drifters engaged in the industry belong to cross-Channel firms; but, while this may be so, the prosperity of the fisheries is certain to benefit the coastal districts to a very substantial extent, even though the largest proportion of the earnings goes to England or Scotland. Certain improvements are being made at Ardglass, the principal centre of the industry in the North, but it is questionable whether these will attract larger fleets to the little County Down harbour.

It is essential that steps should be taken by the Government to stimulate the fisheries and encourage local enterprise, as the latest figures show a serious decline in the quantity of fish landed on our shores. At Ardglass the season's total catches to date weighed 17,871 cwts., valued at £11,187, as compared with 29,205 cwts., worth £19,668 in the corresponding period of last year. A better story has to be told of Portavogie, where there is a slight increase in value, although there was a decrease in the catches, the figures for this season being 4,463 cwts., value £1,758, against 4,761 cwts., value £1,701, last year. At Kilkeel the figures were—5,724 cwts., value £2,782, compared with 4,415 cwts., value £2,311, for the corresponding period of 1928.

COMPLAINT OF THE EXILES.

The frequent stories of the hardships endured by young emigrants from the British Isles who have crossed the ocean to work on Canadian farms have a special interest for the people of Northern Ireland. Almost every week during the summer season large numbers of young men and women leave Belfast for the great Dominion, most of whom would do well in their own country if conditions were favourable. Tens of thousands of them have crossed the Atlantic within recent years from the Six Counties, as they were unable to find work at home, and their departure has largely decreased the unemployment figures which are presented with so much satisfaction by the Ministry of Labour from time to time.

According to the statements made by returned emigrants, the working conditions in Canada are not as satisfactory as they are said to be by officials at home. Thousands of men are stated to be out of work in Montreal, Winnipeg and Quebec, and all are anxious to return to the old country, the rosy promises made to them having failed to come true. Even when these wanderers manage to get jobs they have to work from dawn until dark for ten dollars—or £2 10s. per month.

Some of these men were trained by the British Ministry of Labour and received assisted passages, but they were glad to get back. The Northern Government has a training centre in County Armagh, and crowds of youths with a superficial knowledge of agriculture are shipped away regularly to compete with men born to the job in the wide spaces of the Dominions. If they worked as hard here as they have to work in Canada there would be no need for them to emigrate.

MR. DEVLIN, M.P.

When not engaged on his parliamentary duties, Mr. Joseph Devlin, the Nationalist leader, finds much to do among his constituents in Central and West Belfast. His activities include the organisation of an annual outing at the seaside of about six thousand poor children, and on two days this week Newcastle was crowded with happy throngs of little holiday-makers under his care. Mr. Devlin's appeal for funds was generously supported by all sections of the community; for in true charity there is no thought of party or politics, and the movement was eminently successful. The children were taken by special trains to the kingdom of Mourne, and all received favours and gifts and were served with substantial refreshments.

In such thoughtful actions people of widely divergent opinion are drawn together, and get to know one another's good qualities, which are sometimes obscured in the heat of political controversy. It may not be generally known that Mr. Devlin is deeply interested in the arts, and is a consistent supporter of music. Naturally, Mr. Devlin believes that the salvation of the country lies in a united Ireland, but he recognises the difficulties of the problem, and does not hesitate to express the opinion that the border cannot be abolished without the desire and consent of the North.

THE TOLL OF THE ROADS.

Notwithstanding the strenuous efforts of the "safety first" campaign, and the improvements in traffic regulations, the toll of the road continues to flourish, and hardly a week passes but some unfortunate persons are either killed or maimed. At a recent inquest Dr. Graham, the Belfast City Coroner, spoke at length about "joy riding" and its danger to the pedestrian. On the Cavehill road and Antrim road especially, the recklessness of young men in cars and on motor cycles is only too much in evidence. It is a common occurrence on these two roads to see cars and cycles "tried out," and the speed in such trials ranges from forty and fifty miles an hour.

This should not be permitted, and the public in general would welcome an effort to suppress "road-hogs." If drastic measures were adopted in the case of defaulters, their antics very soon would come to an end. It has been suggested that if the application of the law dealing with such cases were put entirely into the hands of resident magistrates there would be a rapid change for the better. In the meantime, while plans are being discussed and elaborated, the public must surrender its quota to satisfy the demands of the speed fiends.

DUBLIN TRANSPORT CHAOS.

"CAUSES AND CIRCUMSTANCES."

SCOPE AND FUNCTIONS OF COURT OF INQUIRY.

(BY "ARTIFEX.")

"Gentlemen"—said the chairman of an American debating society—"the subject for discussion to-night is the immortality of the human soul. The debate will last half an hour—and no speaker must take more than three minutes!"

"Gentlemen"—says the Minister for Industry and Commerce, to Judge Davitt and his colleagues—"I expect you to be able to report to me fully within a week or t.n days upon the 'causes and circumstances' which have produced chaos and deadlock in Dublin passenger transport organisation." The parallel may not be perfect; but it may help to serve a definite and useful purpose—which I shall try, as briefly as possible, to outline.

THE COURT AND ITS SCOPE.

First of all, I have no hesitation in offering my congratulations to the Minister for Industry and Commerce upon the personnel of the Court which he has selected, and upon the terms of reference; and, next, in tendering my heartiest congratulations to the Irish Times, who, alone, saw clearly from the beginning of the present crisis that its solution would compel the Government, however reluctantly, at last to face some of the fundamental causes which have produced the present deadlock.

TRAMWAY COMPANY'S POSITION.

In my last contribution upon the subject (which appeared in the Irish Times of last Saturday) I suggested a somewhat different procedure to that which is now being adopted. I then expressed my preference for a representative conference as distinct from a judicial tribunal. But I recognise that much may be said in favour of allowing the various parties who are concerned to appear in the witness-box rather than in a conference room. The Court, as distinct from a conference, may, I recognise, secure a more expeditious, even if less permanent, settlement. But—upon another point of practical and urgent importance—evidence is already forthcoming that a further step which I suggested is necessary if the Court of Inquiry is to have a reasonable opportunity to discharge its wide and comprehensive terms of reference. Had the Executive Council, as I suggested—through President Cosgrave, or other responsible Minister — definitely announced that, subject to details, the Government would expedite legislation to give effect to the recommendations of the Court of Inquiry, there is little doubt that the directors of the Tramways Company would have agreed to an immediate resumption of services on a status quo basis. There is still time, and definite necessity, for such an undertaking to be given. With a resolution of the immediate deadlock the Court could proceed to a searching investigation, and to the preparation of a calm and fully considered discharge of its terms of reference. Otherwise—struggling hastily with many years' accumulation of complex and difficult problems—Judge Davitt and his colleagues (however great their industry and ingenuity may prove to be) can do little to "unscramble the egg" of our street traffic puzzle.

AN INTERIM REPORT.

It has been suggested—and the suggestion may be a good one—that the Court may find itself in a position, within a few days, to present some kind of interim report which, while bringing about a temporary solution of the present deadlock, would enable it subsequently to proceed to a wide and calm consideration of its formidable and comprehensive terms of reference. In other words, that its immediate proceedings may form a basis for negotiation, and for a provisional agreement between the Tramways Company and its employés, to extend over a few weeks, during which the Court would have time and opportunity to explore the manifold and real "causes and circumstances" which have produced the present crisis.

But, should President Cosgrave and his colleagues still hesitate to give an assurance of their intention to promote such legislation as would change the attitude of the Tramways Company, one can only hope that the Court will concentrate its primary activities upon bringing about a temporary agreement, and so secure for itself the necessary later conditions under which its wide and very far-reaching functions may be adequately discharged.

"CAUSES."

Assuming that the Court, by these or other means, had succeeded in discharging its primary duties as a kind of camouflaged body of arbitrators or drum-head court-martial, it is of immediate interest to reflect upon the kind of questions which its members will have to ask themselves, and upon which they would be prepared to receive evidence. To what extent, if any, has the present position been "caused" by the decision to distribute transport functions among a series of different Government departments, instead of concentrating them in the hands of a Ministry for Transport? Should such a Ministry now be created? If not, should a Traffic Board, representative of the various Ministries concerned in street transport, be constituted for Greater Dublin? What should be the constitution of such a body? Should tramway and other public passenger services in Greater Dublin be placed under municipal control; or under the control of a hybrid body consisting of public representatives and private capitalists? If not, should the Tramways Company be encouraged to substitute omnibuses for tramcar services by some process of limiting the number of licences to be issued for public service vehicles, and by securing rights to claim a certain proportion of such limited licences?

"CIRCUMSTANCES."

Or, again, to what extent is it desirable to propose special legislation for Dublin street traffic as distinct from the regulation of motor traffic generally as outlined in the report of the Free State Inter-Departmental Committee on Road Traffic? On such particular "circumstances" I imagine that the members of the Court of Inquiry are likely to find themselves up against some extremely thorny and difficult questions should they decide that special measures are necessary for Dublin. They will have to try and find out—privately or publicly—from the Minister for Local Government what are to be the boundaries of Greater Dublin; or, alternatively, to define an ad hoc urban transport area of their own. On another aspect of the problem they will have to consider steps which are obviously necessary to relieve the congestion and the risks of traffic at such points as O'Connell Bridge and College Green. In this connection they will have to decide whether trams or omnibuses, or either of them, should be allowed to use these congested thoroughfares; and, if not, to what extent the bridge problem, and other town-planning necessities, must affect the whole problem of traffic control.

A TOO WIDE INTERPRETATION?

But now I can hear the man-in-the-street—whose immediate concern is to see the end of the strike and get on with his business—exclaim that these questions have nothing to do with the Court of Inquiry! I can hear various objectors say that I am indulging in an altogether excessive interpretation of the Court's terms of reference. Perhaps so! But, if that be so, the Court's instructions have been so loosely drawn as to be altogether misleading. From which it follows that another body, or bodies, will have to be set up to deal with problems which were recognised to be urgent before any threat of the present tramway crisis appeared. Already we have had innumerable Commissions and inquiries into various branches of civic administration and control.

Experience has shown us the danger and futility of piecemeal procedure. If the proceedings and findings of Judge Davitt's Court are to be but a repetition of such patchwork expedients they can only add one more item to a long list of our might-have-beens! But I have better hopes! I believe that the Court—given the necessary time—will interpret its terms of reference with sufficient liberality to ensure a comprehensive treatment of the whole mass of problems which have been created by the development of modern street transport. If not, the citizens of Dublin will have suffered no small measure of inconvenience and loss for nothing. Once more we shall have had "much cry and little wool!"

TRAM DEADLOCK REMAINS.

COURT OF INQUIRY ON MONDAY.

HOW TRADE IS BEING AFFECTED.

The Court of Inquiry which has been set up under the Industrial Courts Act, 1919, to investigate the causes and circumstances of the Dublin tramway dispute, will hold a preliminary meeting early on next Monday morning to arrange procedure.

In view of the declared desire of the Ministry of Industry and Commerce that the Court should pursue its inquiry with the greatest expedition, it is not improbable that the first formal session for the hearing of evidence will be held on Monday afternoon.

We understand that Mr. W. J. Grey, A.C.A., Secretary of the Alliance and Dublin Consumers' Gas Company, who acted as an arbitrator in the recent dispute at the Inchicore Works of the Great Southern Railways Company, has been asked to advise in the preparation and submission of the Tramways Company's case before the Court of Inquiry.

Mr. Harold E. Clay, National Secretary of the Passenger Group, Amalgamated Transport and General Workers' Union, is preparing the case for the union, which he will represent at the inquiry.

Mr. Clay takes the view that the inquiry must go into all matters relative to transport in the City and County of Dublin, and consider the regulation and control of traffic, as well as way-leaves, rates and maintenance charges borne by the Dublin United Tramways Company. He proposes to deal with all these points if the Court of Inquiry agrees to accept such evidence.

In conversation with an Irish Times representative yesterday, Mr. Clay said that a matter that deserved to be stressed, but seemed to have been overlooked almost entirely so far, was that the company had to pay rates on the track as well as on buildings. He thought that the company certainly was entitled to relief in this, as in other respects.

There was no development in the strike situation yesterday. The company had no statement to make, and there seems to be no possibility of a resumption of the services before the Court of Inquiry concludes its work.

Yesterday the Union began payment of the second week's strike pay. Payment of benefits will be concluded to-day.

There has been no more word of an appeal to the public for funds. Mr. P. T. Daly, Secretary of the Dublin Trades and Labour Council, had nothing to say on the subject yesterday.

THE EFFECT ON TRADE.

GAINS IN SOME LINES: LOSSES IN OTHERS.

Statements have been made that the trade of the city is being hit by the strike, but from investigation it would appear that the losses in trade in certain quarters are counterbalanced by gains made in others.

Outstanding in this respect is the great increase in the motor trade in all departments. Garages and all accessory shops are working overtime to cope with the demand, and, of course, the 'buses are making money as fast as they can handle traffic. On some routes the minimum 'bus fare has been raised from 1d. to 1½d., which looks rather like a case of making hay while the sun shines.

The bicycle trade has received a big impetus, and while there has been only a slight increase in the sales of new machines, the workshops are working full time in the repair and renovation of machines for the road. The volume of cycling traffic on the streets of the city is more noticeable than ever before.

GAINERS.

- 'Bus owners.
- Motor trade.
- Bicycle shops.
- Railway companies.
- Boot retailers and repairers.
- Restaurant keepers.
- Suburban shopkeepers.

LOSERS.

- The general public.
- The Tramways Company.
- Tramway employés.
- Some shopkeepers in centre of city.

NO CHANGE.

- Theatres.
- Picture Houses.

NOTHING LIKE LEATHER.

Another trade which has benefited by the strike is the boot trade. Thousands of people are walking many more miles each day, with the resultant wear and tear on boots and shoes. The boot repair shops in all quarters are doing very well indeed, while the retailers are doing a brisk trade in the sale of new footwear.

Regarding trade generally, there has been no decrease, for while the shopping centres in the city are doing a quieter business because fewer people are coming into the city for their general household necessities increased business is being done by the suburban shopkeepers.

Suburban shopkeepers deny that they are taking advantage of the strike to make increases in the prices of necessary goods.

SHOPS THAT ARE LOSING MONEY.

The big shopping centres like Sackville street, Henry street and Grafton street have certainly suffered slightly. Inquiries failed to bring to light any instances in which employés have been dismissed by firms because of the loss of trade thus occasioned.

The restaurants in the centre of the city are meeting an increased call on their resources. Thousands of people who were in the habit of going home for lunch now find it more convenient to take a meal in town.

Despite the present lack of adequate transport facilities, the theatre and picture houses do not seem to have been affected, for their patrons are to be seen each evening in queues just as large as ever outside.

There has been a defection on the part of regular 'bus users from that method of transport to the more comfortable railway system, because the discomforts of travel by 'buses have increased to an almost unbearable extent.

BLIND EYE ON THE CLOCK.

One result of the tram strike is the unsurmountable problem presented to workers of getting to work every morning at the proper time. Employers in factories, workshops, offices, and trades generally, are making every allowance, and close their eyes when employés arrive from ten minutes to half-an-hour late.

So far, only a few blue ribbons have been seen on motor cars intimating that the drivers were prepared to give people lifts, though motorists generally are obliging in that respect.

PRESIDENT COSGRAVE ON HOLIDAY.

VISIT TO HISTORIC RUINS.

President Cosgrave and his wife and family are at present staying with Mr. James Gilvarry, lawyer, New York, at his Irish residence, "Alalathe," Killala, and are spending a quiet holiday visiting scenes of local interest and beauty spots. On Wednesday he visited the historic ruins of Moyne Abbey. This monastery was established in the sixteenth century by the order of the Franciscan monks after the interdiction of the Abbey of Rosserk, the monks of which refused to comply with the rules of strict observance. Moyne Abbey, in which the First Chapter of the Order of Franciscans was held in the year 1602, is one of the most historic ruins in the country.

President Cosgrave was much interested in the magnificent architecture of the ruins, which are well preserved.

President Cosgrave attends Mass in Killala every morning, and afterwards rides in the park attached to Mr. Gilvarry's house.

A retired Belfast school teacher, Miss Norwood, was found dead yesterday in her home, Cliftonpark avenue. She was last seen alive on Tuesday night, and her failure to put in an appearance, together with the fact that the light was still burning in her bedroom after nine o'clock yesterday morning, led to the neighbours informing the police constable on beat duty in the area. When he gained access to the house he found the body lying on the floor of the bedroom, fully dressed with the exception of shoes. It is believed that heart failure was the cause of death.

Madden has been tenant of the cottage for eight years, but complaints were made to the Board that he did not always reside in the house, and he was asked to attend the meeting to explain his position. He admitted that he is a bachelor, and it was pointed out to him that the Board has an order that unmarried men shall not get labourers' cottages where married men are available. The Board decided to give Madden twelve months to get married, and if he does not he must leave.

DUMP FOUND NEAR FERMOY.

Sergeant Joseph Smyth, Fermoy, and Detective Officer Kirkpatrick found a dump of arms and ammunition at the Castle at Carrigabrick, on the banks of the Blackwater, a short distance from Fermoy. The dump was cleverly concealed at the base of a wall, and was covered with stones and a quantity of brushwood. The weapons, which consisted of several revolvers and a service rifle, seemed to have been oiled recently, and were in a good state of preservation. There also was found two bombs and a quantity of ammunition of about 200 rounds of a varied assortment, and all were removed to the Civic Guard station at Fermoy.

PRISON FOR BICYCLE THIEVES.

At Castlebellingham (Co. Louth) District Court two boys—Samuel Smith and Patrick Duffy, both of whom stated they were natives of Belfast—were sent to jail for a month, with hard labour, for the larceny of a bicycle near Ardee. The defendants stated that they had been in the Belfast Union for the past two years, and were walking to Drogheda in search of work when they took a bicycle from the roadside to get to their destination. District Justice Goff said that he did not like the idea of sending young fellows to jail; but when two vagrants walked up and took somebody else's property they deserved little sympathy. He warned them when they left Mountjoy to quickly get to the other side of the border.

DISTURBING A COURT.

When District Justice Farrell opened the Dungarvan Court last Wednesday morning there was heard considerable hammering in the vicinity. The Justice listened for a few moments and then called on one of the Guards to go outside and stop the noise. The guard did so, but returned in a few minutes and told the Justice the man refused to cease. The Justice—This is the first time I have seen an order of this court disobeyed. Superintendent O'Shea then went out, and on returning told the Justice that the man had desisted. The Justice—That is all right. The hammering must not go on again until the court rises. At the close of the business the Justice directed the crier to tell the man that he might resume his work.

LIVERPOOL MAN DROWNED.

At the inquest in Warrenpoint yesterday on the body of George Robert Hawthorne (22), railway porter, 48 Southdale road, Wavertree, Liverpool, the evidence showed that although he could not swim, and had not been in the water half a dozen times in his life, deceased man took a boat on August 20th, and with Frederick S. Andrew, of 6 Russell road, Sefton Park, Liverpool, went out to the middle of Carlingford Lough for a bathe. They took photos of each other and the deceased man dived or fell overboard and sank, only coming to the surface once. His mother said that he was training to be a professional boxer, and was strong and healthy. Dr. O'Tierney certified that death was due to drowning. Coroner Heron said such an act as Hawthorn's was bound to end as it did when he could not swim. A verdict of "accidental death" was returned.

OLD WOMAN'S FATAL FALL.

Mrs. Catherine Coen (80), a widow, of Ballymagibbon, Cong, Co. Mayo, who was on holidays at Salthill, Galway, has died at Galway Central Hospital as a result of a fall at Salthill, when she was knocked down by a push bicycle, ridden by Charles Horan, a clerical student, of Dalysfort road, Salthill. At the inquest a companion of Mrs. Coen gave evidence that they were going for a walk when they heard the sound of a bicycle behind them. Mrs. Coen stepped hurriedly towards the middle of the road and ran into the bicycle. She was thrown and her skull fractured. Charles Horan, in evidence, said that he was on his correct side of the road and going down hill when Mrs. Coen stepped in front of his bicycle, and he was thrown owing to the quick application of his brakes. The bicycle merely brushed Mrs. Coen's clothes, but when witness was falling his hand hit against Mrs. Coen, and he thought that was what caused her to fall. The jury found that death was accidental and that no blame attached to Mr. Horan.

USE OF COURTHOUSE.

"Strictly speaking, the Sheriff is the only person who has sole control of courthouses in the county, and has the right to let them. You are here to-day as trespassers with his permission, and your officials come to their work daily also as trespassers; but, fortunately, the Sheriff is a level-headed man, and he never interferes with the Council's discretion." So said the Secretary to Wicklow County Council when complaints were made of the holding of meetings in Bray new courthouse without first seeking the Council's sanction. He added that invariably he refused applications, because he would not accept the responsibility of letting property valued in Wicklow at £12,000, in Bray at £5,000, in Tinahely at £8,000, and it would be unfair and unjust for him to throw that task and responsibility upon the Chairman of the Council. An order was made that in future no permission for meetings or fixtures be granted to any person by the caretaker unless and until he received the written authority of the Secretary, and that the application must first be reviewed by the Council or the Finance Committee, and a charge made for its use on behalf of the caretaker.

LEIPZIG AUTUMN FAIR.

VISITORS FROM IRELAND.

A large contingent of Irish business men and women are in attendance at the great Autumn Fair in Leipzig this week, where more than 87,000 buyers from all parts of the world are assembled.

The Fair was officially opened on Sunday under favourable weather conditions and with the customary pomp and ceremony, which lent a carnival effect to the proceedings. Most of the Irish visitors had arrived for the opening ceremony, and amongst those present was Mr. J. J. Buckley, the Irish-American financier, who is here to inspect and purchase the last thing in plant and machinery for the recently-acquired spinning and weaving mills in Cork. Also present were:—Mr. T. E. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. Coombs, Messrs. James, Denis and Francis Kennedy, Mr. Victor Zorn, Miss Hutton, Miss Morris, Mrs. and Miss Byrne, Mrs. Nolan and Mr. Reeves, all from Dublin; Mr. T. M. Collier, of Bray; Mr. B. Atkins and Mr. E. W. Willis, of Cork; Mr. C. Hearn, of New Ross; Mr. G. P. Magrath, of Dundalk; Mr. L. Corrigan and Dr. J. O'Duffy, of Castleblayney.

It would be difficult, if not impossible, to describe the wonders of Leipzig, but an estimate of its size may be gathered from the fact that it would take the average man five days to walk over all the exhibition halls and to inspect the varied and attractive displays they contain. The fact that £50,000,000 worth of goods was sold by German exhibitors alone as a result of the Leipzig Spring Fair last March will convey some idea of the colossal business that is transacted during the Fair, which is a veritable commercial league of nations.

Much satisfaction is expressed by the Irish visitors with the enterprise of the Irish Times and Irish Independent in sending copies of their daily editions by air mail to the rendezvous and G.H.Q. of the Irish contingent at the Hotel Fuerstenhof, which enables them to keep in touch with current happenings at home.

LIMERICK STRIKE SETTLED.

WORK TO BE RESUMED IN BUILDING TRADE.

The Limerick building trade dispute, which has lasted for four weeks, was settled at a conference held in the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, and the men will resume work immediately. The demand was for a flat rate of 1s. 3½d. an hour, and a compromise was come to at 1s. 1d. an hour for a forty-seven hour week. The settlement has given general satisfaction in the city, where many building contracts had been held up.

The Mayor (Councillor Keyes), who presided, convened the conference, and had the assistance of the Rev. T. J. McNamara, Adm., St. John's, in bringing the parties in dispute together.

At the proceedings, which occupied nearly three hours, the master builders' group, the Employers' Federation, and the Transport and General Workers' Union were represented.

REHEARSAL OF CIVIC WEEK PAGEANT.

FILM TAKEN OF THE SCENES.

A rehearsal of the historical pageant, which will be held in the Mansion House, Dublin, during Civic Week, took place in College Park, Trinity College, Dublin, yesterday morning. The rehearsal was held for the purpose of taking a film of one of the scenes, which will be shown on the screen at the Irish Salon of Photography during the week.

Mr. Hilton Edwards, the producer, and Mr. Micheal Mac Liammoir, the writer of the play for the pageant, directed the taking of the scene, which included a cast of some fifty players.

BELFAST-DUBLIN 'BUSES.

NEW CATHERWOOD DEAL.

Messrs. H. M. S. Catherwood, 'bus proprietors, Upper Library street, Belfast, have acquired the International 'Bus Service operating between Belfast and Dublin, and carried on by Mr. Sydney Baird, 5 College square East. The 'buses are to be retained on the Dublin route to improve the existing services. This is the eighth service acquired by Messrs. Catherwood, including the Derry Corporation 'buses.

LULWORTH CASTLE BURNED DOWN.

FIREMEN INJURED BY MOLTEN LEAD.

A disastrous fire has destroyed Lulworth Castle, Wareham, Dorset, the residence of Mr. Herbert Weld, the former owner of the yacht Lulworth. Two members of the Dorchester Fire Brigade—E. Daniels and E. Lock—were injured by molten lead and glass, and were removed to Dorchester Hospital.

When the outbreak was discovered servants and estate hands endeavoured to fight it, but their efforts met with little success, and the north-east wing of the castle was soon well alight. The Dorchester Brigade were the first to arrive, but when they did so the flames were gaining the upper hand, and gradually spread along the whole eastern front of the Castle. Every effort was made to save the furniture, and a great deal on the ground floor was carried to safety. But the greater portion of the effects on the second and third floors had to be left owing to the increasing danger from the flames. Within five hours of the commencement of the blaze the whole interior was a furnace, and it was impossible to approach within a considerable distance owing to falling masonry.

The whole of the valuable gold and silver plate was saved.

BOXING SECOND ASSAULTS REFEREE.

At Porth, Glamorgan, Police Court yesterday Reginald Palfryman, a Penygraig collier, was fined five shillings for assaulting William Bevan, the oldest acting referee under the Welsh Branch of the British Boxing Board of Control, during a contest at Tonypandy on August 17th. The assault took place during a boxing match at which Palfryman was acting as a second.

Palfryman apologised for having lost his temper. The Bench remarked that rules were laid down for the conduct of clean sport and must be observed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

NURSING IN IRELAND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Your correspondent's article on "The Nurse and Conditions in Her Profession" contains some statements of facts recognised by many thinking people. That last paragraph—i.e., "The alleged apathy of the nurses might be replaced if they realised the general public stood behind them"—gives food for thought. May I point out that nursing appeals to many women as a vocation—an opportunity of service—and no one would expect women of that stamp to adopt "trade union methods" even to secure better salaries—or pensions?

It is generally admitted that pensions ought to be established for nurses, and that present salaries are totally inadequate for services rendered, but the community has full opportunities of setting that right now, and doing so freely and generously.

Jubilee nurses have served the poor of this country in sickness and also taught the laws of health, etc., in many districts throughout Ireland for over 30 years. The patients are all most grateful, but they are poor and inarticulate. The Jubilee Institute is now building up a fund to pay small pensions to those devoted pioneers who have given their all, without stint, or even counting the cost to themselves. Yet it is exceedingly difficult—aye, seems well-nigh impossible—to get the necessary £20,000. Everybody agrees that those pensions are due, thoroughly deserved, and honestly earned, and yet the members of the Committee are harassed in trying to find fresh entertainments to coax a few pounds from the public to add to this fund, which ought to be in hand now, if pensions are to be paid to Jubilee nurses in Ireland next year, when England begins paying pensions to her Jubilee nurses. What do the people of Ireland say about it, and what are they prepared to give, to show that they mean what they say? Surely the eyes of the young women "born to be nurses" are on the public, for to the young actions speak louder than words!—Yours, etc.,

W. PHYLLIS MOORE, Vice-President, Queen's Institute of District Nursing in Ireland.

36 South Frederick street, Dublin, C. 2.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—With reference to the interesting article, "The Nurse," which appeared in your paper of 24th inst., I would be glad if you would allow me to make a few remarks.

Small wonder is it that the young women of education and brains are slow to enter the nursing profession under its present conditions. A nurse who trains in this country has, as a rule, a very substantial fee to pay, plus the expenses of uniform and other details; then during her training she has to work hard with both her hands and brain, having in her spare time to study for examinations. At the end of three or four years—according to the training school—she is a trained nurse, ready to reap the reward of those hard years. What is that reward? Let us take one recent example.

In the Kilkenny People of 24th inst.—the very day that your article appeared—there may be seen the report of a meeting of the Kilkenny County Board of Health. They are discussing the question of salary for a fully trained nurse, who also holds her midwifery certificate. They offered the salary of £55 and £26 10s. ration allowance, and Dr. Clinch had actually suggested £75, plus the ration allowance. The Board were properly horrified at the idea of paying such a salary to a nurse. "We are losing a lot of money over this," cried one. And another thrifty soul added—"We can get our ordinary midwives outside for £40. I think that £55 per year and £26 10s. is quite sufficient to offer, and that we can obtain a competent nurse for that salary." The resolution was passed unanimously.

So now we see what a nurse may expect to earn in this country after her years of training. She is to feed and clothe herself, take her holidays, and put by for a rainy day—all out of the huge salary of £81 10s. per annum. One wonders which of those gallant gentlemen on the County Kilkenny Board of Health would feed himself on £26 10s. a year, or double or treble that amount? At the same Board meeting the superannuation allowance of a midwife with 28½ years' service was discussed. The maximum pension was £34 13s. 4d. and the minimum £24 5s. 4d. The minimum was granted. Consider the pay of nurses in the nursing homes in Dublin. A good domestic servant gets higher wages to-day. Contrast then the fees paid by the patients, and please do a little thinking.

The midwives are in an even worse condition. For them £40 per annum is a good average; some start at £30 to £52, and at the present time the maximum—only allowed by a few Boards—is £67. These women are supposed to supplement this by private cases, but there are many districts where the private cases are few and far between.

Your correspondent seems to think that nurses are apathetic about their conditions. In the past they may have been so—may have

MORE MEN DISCHARGED

Owing to the hold-up of work caused by the strike of joiners in the Belfast shipyards, over six hundred skilled and unskilled men have been paid off by Messrs. Harland and Wolff, Ltd. About one thousand joiners went on strike nineteen weeks ago, when the company refused their demand for an increase of three shillings per week in their wages. Now over three thousand other workers are involved in the dispute. There is plenty of work available for the men if the joiners were not on strike. The firm have over 50,000 tons of shipping at the finishing wharfs at Belfast awaiting completion, and Messrs. Workman, Clark and Co. have three large carriers delayed by the strike.

The prolongation of the dispute is proving unpopular with the other sections of workmen, particularly as the joiners are paid in Belfast on a higher scale than in Great Britain.

The Employers' Federation and the executive of the Woodworkers' Society are negotiating for a settlement.

FOUND DEAD IN BATHROOM.

DROGHEDA MAN'S SAD END.

Mr. Luke Healy, who had been "cox" of the crews of the Drogheda Rowing Club for many years, and was one of the most popular young men in the town, died suddenly last Wednesday night at Bettystown, where his family are staying for the summer season. Mr. Healy, it appears, went out to the sea for a bathe at seven o'clock, and after his return to the house he dined, and was apparently feeling in the best of health. He then prepared to go to a golf club dance at Bettystown, and his mother being alarmed at the length of time he was in the bathroom went to the door and called. Receiving no reply she summoned help, and had the door burst in, when Mr. Healy was found dead. Death is believed to have been due to heart failure.

ULSTER MOTOR CYCLE RACE.

NEARLY EIGHTY ENTRIES RECEIVED.

The arrangements for the Ulster Grand Prix over the Clady course, near Belfast, on Saturday, the 7th of September, are now almost complete. Altogether nearly eighty entries have been received for the event. Graham W. Walker, of Enfield, who broke all records last year, will again ride a Rudge-Whitworth; C. J. P. Dodson will ride a Sunbeam. H. G. Tyrell-Smith is to be a member of the Rudge team.

Last year Walker averaged 80.07 miles per hour for the course, with 82.09 as his fastest lap. It is expected that this year these "record" figures will be surpassed.

There will only be three classes in the race on this occasion, as the over 500 c.c. class has been eliminated through an insufficiency of entries.

felt hopeless in this matter. But we are waking up now, trying to keep abreast with the times and to better our professional status. Within the Irish Nurses' Union are members from every branch—general trained, midwifery and mental—and we are proud to be able to say that we have been instrumental in obtaining better conditions for many of our members. Also the keen interest shown by nurses in their post-graduate courses is a proof that they are alive to the need of keeping up to date in their profession. But a lot remains to be done yet. Above all, we have to educate the public up to the standard when they will realise that the nursing profession is the worst paid in the world, and that it must be so no longer.

In conclusion, I would like to thank your correspondent for the understanding sympathy expressed in his—or her—article.—Yours, etc.,

ANNIE M. SMITHSON, R.G.N., C.M.B., Secretary.

MOTORS AND THE PUBLIC.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—There have been letters urging motorists to give lifts. If a motorist gives a person a lift and that person is injured while in the car the motorist will have to pay the damages, as very few insurance companies cover passengers. Last year or so a motorist had to pay £4,000 damages for his kind action in giving a lift. People forget these facts when writing about motorists and lifts.—Yours, etc., "L. H."

ENGLISHMAN'S ADVENTURE IN SWITZERLAND.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
BERNE, Thursday.

The Court of Appeal of the Canton of Berne has upheld in all points the sentence of the District Court on the brothers Balsiger, peasants from the Gurnn district, who, on April 27, made a brutal attack on Mr. J. H. Leche, the First Secretary of the British Legation, when he unwittingly trespassed on their land.

The Balsigers were sentenced on July 2nd to twenty days' imprisonment, and ordered to pay 50 francs fine, 250 francs compensation to the plaintiff, 100 francs damages, and the plaintiff's costs in the action.

[NOTE.—While walking through some fields on April 27 Mr. Leche was stopped by the two peasants and told that he was trespassing. He apologised, and was about to retrace his steps when he was, it was alleged, savagely attacked from behind, felled to the ground with a blow from a pitchfork, and kicked and roughly handled.]

Arab and Jew.

Despite the lurid stories of bloodshed and rapine which still are being circulated by news agencies from Palestine, the Government seems to have the situation fairly well in hand. There, undoubtedly, has been a considerable amount of serious rioting, in the course of which many lives have been lost; but the prompt measures that were taken by the Deputy High Commissioner have been effective, and the landing of naval ratings at Jaffa has had very salutary results. Rioting in Palestine is nothing new. In the old days of the Ottoman Empire skirmishes between the various sects were frequent, and religious feast days—Moslem, Jewish and even Christian—generally produced a crop of broken heads. The present disturbances began last week in Jerusalem. Moslem opinion had become incensed at the action of Jewish worshippers at the so-called Wailing Wall, which is recognised by the Palestinian Government as Moslem property, but to which access is allowed to the Jews for the purposes of prayer. It seems that the Arabs had no objection to the presence of Jewish worshippers at the wall; but they objected strongly to the placing of benches and chairs in the alleyway alongside it. They claim that several attempts were made to persuade the Jews to remove these articles of furniture, but without avail. Finally, despite the efforts of the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, the Arab mob got out of hand. Riots began at the Jaffa and Damascus Gates. The Palestine Police Force, which is composed of Arabs and Jews, with a few British officers, was virtually helpless, and, as the Jews in the city were in a minority, they undoubtedly were treated very savagely. Some hideous crimes were committed, and, unfortunately, the trouble spread like wild-fire throughout the country.

From Haifa to Hebron, and from Jaffa to Jericho, Arab and Jew have been in fatal combat. Jewish colonies in every part of Palestine have been attacked, not only by the local Arabs, but also by marauding tribes which have swarmed across the Jordan in search of loot. There can be no doubt at all that the Arabs have been the aggressors in every instance, and the British forces in some parts of the country have been compelled to fire on the attacking mob, with the result that there have been some serious casualties. The position of the British authorities is exceedingly delicate. Under the mandate from the League of Nations they are responsible for the good government of Palestine. The policy of the British Government during the war has confronted them with an almost impossible task, and we fear very much that, although the present disturbances may be quelled without much difficulty, the future of Palestine will be fraught with many dangers. The initial mistake was made when the British Government promised the Arabs that virtually all the Arab lands, including Palestine, would be formed into an Arab Kingdom. As a result of this promise, Hussein of the Hedjaz, with his sons, threw himself into the Allied cause, and was largely responsible for the defeat of Turkey. Almost simultaneously, however, the famous Sykes-Picôt Treaty was signed. This secret pact divided Turkey's possessions in Asia Minor into British and French spheres of influence, and, obviously, was completely incompatible with the promise to the Arabs. Finally came the Balfour Declaration. This statement, ignoring equally the promise to the Arabs and the Sykes-Picôt Treaty, guaranteed to the Jews the foundation of a national home in Palestine.

Thus there were three conflicting policies in regard to Palestine, and ever since the war His Majesty's Government in Great Britain has been trying in vain to reconcile them. The Arabs were forced to accept the twin kingdom of Iraq and Transjordania in lieu of the Greater Arabia which they had been promised; the French took possession of Syria, and the British assumed control of Palestine, in order, inter alia, to fulfil their promise to the Jews. Not unnaturally, the Arab population of Palestine, who regard the country as their home, resent the immigration of large numbers of Jews; and the nomadic tribes, accustomed to graze their flocks at will throughout the land, find now that some of the most fertile areas have been allotted to Jewish settlers. In the circumstances, a certain amount of bad blood was inevitable from the beginning. Anticipating trouble, the Palestine Government recruited the gendarmerie, which, for a number of years, maintained order in the country with comparative ease. So soon as this force was disbanded, however, rioting began, and now the country is in a condition of serious disorder. In India, where communal riots on a very large scale are fairly frequent, order is maintained by a relatively small force of British troops and police. The problem in Palestine is very much easier, and if the Government had retained its gendarmerie, the present disturbances never would have occurred. If the Jews are to remain in Palestine, adequate measures must be taken for their protection. There is plenty of room for them, as well as for the native Arabs; but it is essential that a modus vivendi between the two races shall be arranged. The immediate problem is a matter for a police solution; but the problem that lies behind it will tax the statesmanship of the British Government very seriously.

Greater Dublin.

At last the Government of the Irish Free State has drafted its proposals for legislation in furtherance of municipal reform in Greater Dublin. The Star, the organ of Cumann na nGaedheal, discloses this week the terms of the bill which will be introduced in the coming session of Dáil Eireann. Nearly three years ago the Greater Dublin Commission issued a report in which a well-considered plan for the revision of the city's boundaries and the reform of its administration was expounded. That plan was the fruit of research by a company of men who were picked—as the members of all Government Commissions are, or ought to be, picked—for their conspicuous qualifications to arrive at a sagacious conclusion. The Commission heard the evidence of experts in all branches of municipal life. It might be thought that a plan devised in such circumstances hardly could be amended. Municipal reform is a matter that lies beyond the scope of party politics; it is an affair for experts, and it is difficult to see how any considerable departure from the Commission's recommendations could be defended on any score, unless wanton interference is necessary for the maintenance of the authority of the politician. According to The Star, immediate legislation will be confined to the revision of the boundaries of the urban area. The Commission's recommendations concerning town-planning and transport—recommendations that affect the vital interests of citizens and the beauty and amenity of the city—will be the subject of legislation at a later date. Always, it seems, legislation on these matters is promised for the mañana that never comes. In the matter of the new city's boundaries, two striking departures from the Commission's plan are proposed. The Commission recommended that, after the federation of the coastal townships along the south side of Dublin Bay, the new coastal borough should be brought under a common authority with Dublin County Borough. This proposal is rejected. In the second place, it appears that the Commission's proposals as to the future boundary of the city on the north side of the Liffey will be disregarded. The Commission proposed the inclusion of a large sweep of land stretching towards Malahide, and the establishment of machinery for the continuous revision of the boundary with the progress of urbanisation. It seems that the Government has resolved to bring in no areas save those that already are heavily urbanised. Areas which still are agricultural, although they may lie between centres of urban development, apparently are to be excluded. In a word, the Government seems to be unable to think of a city save in terms of bricks and concrete, of cramped streets and smoky chimneys. The whole philosophy of modern town-planning science is absent from the outline which The Star sets before us. This is small matter for wonder when the town-planning portion of the Commission's proposals—the portion that ought to be taken first—is left aside for consideration at the Greek Kalends.

King Zogu.

Since the days when Scanderbeg made use of the tuition that he received at the Court of Sultan Amurath II. to defy the conqueror of Constantinople, Albania has been famous for its keen sense of nationality. In its high mountain uplands the natives defied with varying success the mandates of the Grand Turk, and after the Balkan War of 1911-12 the Powers recognised its independence under the rule of Prince William of Wied, who became M'pret of Albania. The Chancelleries of Europe failed to realise that a suave German princeling was no fit ruler for a vigorous, but uncivilised, people. When the Great War began the M'pret and his international advisers incontinently left the country, and a state of anarchy prevailed until the Italian general in charge of an area, which included Albania, proclaimed that country an independent sovereign State. For some years a republic held sway until its President, Ahmed Zogu, assumed the kingship. Recent visitors to Albania agree that King Zogu has eschewed successfully the errors which beset monarchs of small countries. No suggestion of Ruritania characterises the new kingdom. Primus inter pares King Zogu governs his peasant subjects, and we are inclined to think that his rule, probably, is less onerous than that of the European dictators of to-day. According to the Special Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, no thought of exalted matrimonial alliance clouds his vision. "I expect I look at marriage from a different point of view from you English," says the simple king. Quot homines, tot sententiæ, but thus are peoples governed happily.

Territorial Recruitment.

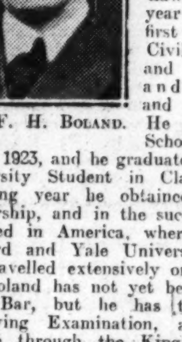
The recruitment of the Territorial Army is causing concern in certain quarters in England. It appears that the London divisions, in spite of the populousness of their areas, are finding great difficulty in maintaining their proper strength. No doubt, a degenerating age and the lure of the cinema and the dance hall keep the London youth away from the drill hall. Those who remember the great work done by the London divisions, and particularly the 47th Division, during the war will regret this lack of spirit in the Cockaigne of to-day. The mere names Festubert, Loos, the Somme and Paaschendaele ought to be enough in themselves to rally the youth of the metropolis to the old standards. Like Ennius, we deplore what seems to be the passing of a greater age. There are rumours to the effect that the Government, in consonance with the spirit of economy and disarmament that obtains to-day, proposes to reduce the number of Territorial divisions. If it should be that a low recruitment should include one or other of the London divisions in this excision, many thousands still alive would hang their heads in shame. Marshal Joffre, after the battle of Loos, numbered the 47th (London) Division among the three best, and most trustworthy, units of the British Army. We hope profoundly that no situation will arise in which military patriotism will need to be tested. Nevertheless, a certain amount of caution is necessary, and, if the country ever should have need to call upon her sons, it will be essential that they shall muster at her call.

DIPLOMATIC SERVICE OF FREE STATE.

TWO CADETS APPOINTED.

The development of the Diplomatic Service of the Irish Free State is shown by the appointment which took place this week of two Cadets in the Service, under the terms of an advertisement published by the Ministry for External Affairs several weeks ago. The two cadets, who have been appointed through the Civil Service Commission, are Mr. John A. Belton, M.A., LL.B. (N.U.I.), Barrister-at-Law, and Mr. Frederick Henry Boland (ex-Sch. Mod.), B.A., T.C.D.

Mr. Frederick Boland is a son of Mr. H. P. Boland, Senior Assistant Secretary to the Ministry for Finance. He received his early education at the Merchant Taylors' School, London, and at the Catholic University School, Dublin. Entering at Trinity College, he had a remarkable career in the University. In the College Law School in the year 1924 he was first prizeman in Civil Law, Feudal and English Law, and Constitutional and Criminal Law. He had taken a Scholarship in Classics in 1923, and he graduated in 1925, being University Student in Classics. In the following year he obtained a Rockefeller Scholarship, and in the succeeding years he travelled in America, where he studied at Harvard and Yale Universities. He has also travelled extensively on the Continent. Mr. Boland has not yet been called to the Irish Bar, but he has taken the Final Qualifying Examination, and during his passage through the King's Inns he has won several prizes.



MR. F. H. BOLAND.

Mr. John A. Belton was born in County Longford, and was educated at Blackrock College, Dublin, and University College, which he entered in 1921. He took his B.A. degree in Modern Languages and his M.A. in French. He was also a prominent figure in the social and sporting life of the college, for which he rowed and played cricket. Entering the King's Inns, he was called to the Irish Bar in 1927, and he has been one of the most popular of the junior members of the Midland Circuit. He has travelled widely in France, Germany, and Switzerland, and was in Germany at the time of the revolution after the Peace Treaty. Like Mr. Boland, he has a good knowledge of foreign languages. Both of the new officers will undergo a period of preliminary training in Dublin before being appointed to posts abroad.

COURT AND PERSONAL.

By permission of the King and the Queen a party was given yesterday afternoon for the members of the "Not Forgotten" Association, which include numbers of wounded men still in hospital. The entertainment was given in the Riding School at Buckingham Palace, where the gardens were also open to the guests. Her Majesty provided the tea and refreshments, and the cigarettes, which were greatly appreciated, were the gift of Princess Mary. Three more parties under the auspices of the "Not Forgotten" Association will be held in the same place during September.

The King's kindness in permitting the private grounds at Sandringham to be thrown open to the public as usual on Wednesday has been much appreciated, and many hundreds of visitors passed through the gates this week, all hoping to have a glimpse of His Majesty. A charge of sixpence is made for admission to the grounds, and this is handed over to local charities.

Princess Mary is in residence at Goldsborough Hall. She and Viscount Lascelles have been entertaining a party, and, with their guests, attended York races each day. Her Royal Highness has not left for Paris, according to a rumour reported yesterday.

The Duke of Argyll has been entertaining several house parties at Inverary Castle, where his sister, Lady Elspeth Campbell, has acted as hostess for him. The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough have been staying at the Carlton Hotel, and have now left London for the Continent. LONDON LETTER.

THE RHINELAND.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
THURSDAY NIGHT.

The British attitude towards evacuation of the Rhineland has been adopted by France and Belgium. Movement of the troops will begin with the least possible delay. The agreement come to between the three occupying Powers is for the evacuation to start early next month and for the complete withdrawal of all the British and Belgian forces within three months of the date of the operations commencing. The French will evacuate the second zone within the same time limit. So far as the third zone is concerned, they will begin to move as soon as the Young plan is put into force, and, thereafter, the withdrawal will proceed without interruption as rapidly as physical conditions permit, the evacuation to be completed within eight months. This country will support France and Belgium by maintaining her representatives on the Inter-Allied Rhineland Commission.

Palestinian Problems.

There is a tendency to saddle the blame for events in Palestine on the local Administration, early changes wherein are definitely foreshadowed by Dr. Weizmann, the President of the World Zionist Organisation. His pronouncement was made after a comparatively brief interview with Lord Passfield, but it is inconceivable that the Colonial Secretary should have said anything to justify that statement before full inquiry has been made into all the circumstances, and for which there has yet been neither time nor opportunity. That warnings were given from credible sources of probable trouble is not disputed. What will have to be determined is whether they were neglected on the spot or passed on and neglected in Whitehall. Lord Melchett is arranging for a deputation of representative British Jews to wait on the Prime Minister in connection with the situation which has arisen in the Near East.

The Schneider Cup.

General satisfaction is expressed that, after all, Italy has finally decided to race for the Schneider Cup. For obvious reasons, it was impossible for the Royal Aero Club to postpone the event, however much they might have desired to meet Italian wishes. It is a really sporting decision, in view of the series of disasters which overtook that country's test flights, no fewer than five of her competing machines being destroyed. The culminating blow was the loss of her finest pilot. The Italian teams will, indeed, make a high-spirited attempt to wrest the trophy from Britain, in that perforce they will have to fly with old pattern machines or with those which there has been no time thoroughly to try out. Lieutenant Williams is reported to be still endeavouring to get the American machine ready in time to ship it in the Berengaria, but the report lacks official confirmation.

Air Speed.

Five Italian machines are en route for Calshot, but their description is not yet disclosed. It may be taken for granted, however, that all the 'planes taking part in the great race on September 7 will be capable of exceeding the speed of 281½ miles an hour, which won the trophy last year. No official timings of the past few days' practice flights on the Solent have been made, but expert observers calculate that 350 miles has been attained. It is astonishing how speeds have developed since the Schneider Race has been in progress. Last year's 281½ miles per hour compared with 246½ in the preceding contest. In 1920 the best performance was 107 miles, while in 1913, the first year of the race, the Cup was won by something under 45½ miles. On two previous occasions the competition has been held on British waters, in 1919 at Bournemouth and in 1923 at Cowes.

Mr. Walter Ayles.

That ultra-"pacifist" Mr. Walter Ayles, the Socialist member for one of the divisions of Bristol, alleges that Hungary is defying the Treaty of Trianon by compulsorily training all her young men for war through the medium of an organisation known as "Levente." He is insistent that the matter shall be taken up by the League of Nations at its next meetings. This is the member who during the Labour Government's last Administration moved the reduction of the British Army to 5,000 of all ranks. Lately he suggested in the House that compulsion was used in the great public schools to fill the ranks of the junior division of the Officers' Training Corps, but was snubbed by the War Minister, Mr. Tom Shaw, for his pains.

The Territorial Army.

The decline in the strength of the British Territorial Army is causing some concern, especially in connection with London's two divisions. These have always been among the weakest of the Army's fourteen second line divisions, notwithstanding the ample recruiting ground which the great Metropolitan area provides. In the South of England the shortage, generally speaking, is most pronounced; it is less so in the Midlands, but the North managed to keep its units well up to establishment. Many suggestions are forthcoming to make up the shortage, but hitherto recruiting campaigns, on which much time and private money have been expended, have fallen lamentably short of their object. Matters might improve if better and more attractive headquarters were provided, but it is hardly likely that public funds will be made available for that purpose. In fact it would not be a matter for surprise if saving on the Force was proposed in the next Army Estimates by cutting down the present number of Territorial divisions.

Irish Talking Film.

Count John McCormack, who is to play his first film rôle, a singing blacksmith, in a talking picture, is to be paid between £80,000 and £100,000 for his five months' work in connection with the new production. He explained matters to a select company at the Mayfair Hotel this afternoon. The cost of the film will be approximately £200,000. Some of the Irish scenes are to be taken in the countryside around Dublin, and others in Killarney. Work will be started on the film early next week, and, according to present arrangements, Count McCormack will sail for Hollywood sometime in October to complete his engagement.

Irish Loyalists.

The Duke of Northumberland, Chairman of the Southern Irish Loyalists' Relief Association, writes to the Press: "It has come to my notice that the Irish Claims Compensation Association of Lennox House have issued an appeal for funds with which to meet the expenses incurred by them in preparing claims for compensation before the Irish Grants Committee.

"It would appear from correspondence received in this office that some people are under the impression that the Southern Irish Loyalists' Relief Association and the Irish Claims Compensation Association are one and the same body. I am, therefore, writing to point out that this Association has no connection with the Irish Claims Compensation Association.

"We have never made any charge to claimants for presenting their claims to the Irish Grants Committee, and I wish, in view of the appeal made by the Irish Claims Compensation Association, to make this point quite clear."

GREATER DUBLIN.

BILL TO BE INTRODUCED IN THE DAIL.

NEW COASTAL BOROUGH.

A LORD MAYOR AND A MAYOR.

A NEW bill, based on the recommendations of the Greater Dublin Commission, will be introduced in the Dail next session.

"The Star," the official organ of the Cumann na nGaedheal Party, in its current issue, gives an outline of the bill's proposals.

A new County Borough of Dublin will embrace the present city and adjacent urban areas, and a new independent Coastal Borough will include the coast townships.

The first-named borough will possess a council of twenty-one elected members, and the council of the Coastal Borough is to have eleven elected members.

The office of Lord Mayor of Dublin will be retained, and the new Coastal Borough is to have a mayor.

Each body, in addition, will possess a city manager, and in each area a flat rate will be introduced.

WHAT THE NEW BILL WILL DO.

"The new bill," says The Star, "proposes to extend the boundaries of the present County Borough of Dublin so as to include the urban districts of Pembroke, Rathmines and Rathgar, together with certain rural portions of Dublin County, including the townlands of Killester, Puckstown, Clonturk and Cabra on the north, and the townlands of Terenure, Rathfarnham, Newtownlittle and Simmonscourt on the south.

"In fixing this area as that of the proposed new county borough, the Department of Local Government aimed, it is gathered, at securing a compact, homogeneous, municipal unit permitting of uniform administration and of the economic provision of municipal services to all portions of its area. It followed therefore, that all districts immediately adjoining the city which had attained a fair degree of urbanisation should be included in the new county borough. These areas would, under the new scheme, obtain improved urban services and at the same time contribute in due proportion to the cost of municipal administration.

"The Department considered it undesirable to add to the city any large area that would involve the inclusion of an undue amount of agricultural land. All the semi-developed and undeveloped areas were accordingly examined with reference to their present state of urbanisation, and to the possibilities of their development in this direction in the near future, and where any area fell short of the minimum requirements it was excluded. Even where isolated urbanised areas existed—e.g., Howth, Raheny, Malahide—it was decided that considerable stretches of undeveloped country intervening precluded the inclusion of these isolated urban areas in the new county borough. Thus the rural area recommended by the Greater Dublin Commission for inclusion in a new county borough was, on full consideration, considerably reduced by the Department, but the new measure provides that, should the Minister, after local inquiry, see cause in the future for the inclusion of any additional area in the county borough to be established under the bill, he may authorise such changes as are deemed necessary by Provisional Order.

THE COASTAL BOROUGH.

"It is proposed to amalgamate the urban districts of Blackrock, Dun Laoghaire, Dalkey and Killiney and Ballybrack, and constitute the new area a borough.

"The Greater Dublin Commission recommended that the townships just mentioned, together with certain rural portions to be detached from Rathdown Rural District, should form a coastal borough to be administered by the Greater Dublin Authority. The rural area mentioned in the Commission's report consists of forty-three townlands, mostly agricultural in character. Of the forty-three, more than half contain a population of less than one per acre, and in fourteen of the latter the population has actually declined since 1911. The population of sixteen townlands which remain is concentrated in the semi-isolated villages of Stillorgan, Kill-o'-the-Grange, Dean's Grange, Cabinteely and Leopardstown. To include these villages in the proposed coastal borough would entail the inclusion of a large area of agricultural land surrounding them, and this, it is considered, would be in the interests neither of the urban nor rural ratepayers.

"The new measure proposes to set up two independent elective authorities to control the new county borough and the coastal borough respectively. The County Borough Council will consist of twenty-one members, to be elected triennially from the proposed county borough, which for electoral purposes will be divided into three electoral areas to be determined by the Minister for Local Government.

"A borough council of eleven members, to be elected triennially, will control the new coastal borough, which for the purpose of the election will form one electoral area. A Lord Mayor of Dublin and a mayor of the coastal borough will be elected annually by the respective local authorities.

"It will be seen that in the foregoing provisions the new measure also departs somewhat from the recommendations of the Greater Dublin Commission. The Commission favoured the setting up of two subordinate councils, one for the county borough and one for the coastal borough, both to be subject to a great council for the whole area. The Department of Local Government, it is understood, rejected this proposal, on the grounds that there would be grave administrative difficulties in carrying out such a scheme. . . .

"The retention of the office of Lord Mayor of Dublin and the creation of a mayoralty in the coastal borough will also prove welcome departures from the report of the Commission, as will also the reduced size of the new councils.

"The various rates now levied in the county borough and in Pembroke and Rathmines will be abolished under the new measure, and replaced by a consolidated municipal rate leviable over the whole area of the new county borough, subject to the provisions for the relief of rates on agricultural land and the continuance of certain other exemptions from full rating liability. . . . The new proposal will, we understand, result in the levying of a flat rate over the whole area, to meet the cost of municipal services in future. This rate will be so devised as to permit of proportionate abatements in lieu of existing exemptions on agricultural land, vacant premises, public buildings, etc.

A FLAT RATE.

"The expenses of the Council of the Coastal Borough will be met by means of a flat rate. Contributions will be paid by the new borough as heretofore by the urban district, to the County Council in respect of county services. . . .

"The townships . . . will obtain the civic distinction attaching to a borough, with a mayor at its head.

"The principles of city management, as set out in the Cork City Management Act, 1928, will be applied in the county borough and the coastal borough. . . . The provisions as to the relations between the council, the mayor and the manager will also follow the precedent of the Cork City Management Act.

"Machinery will be provided for the adjustment of property, debts, etc., and the re-arrangement of staff as between the new Local Government areas. The The Local Elections (Dublin) Act of this year continues the Commissioners in office until September 30th, 1930, and it is anticipated that the legislation now proposed will be in full effect by that date. . . .

"The provisions of the Local Government Acts, 1925 and 1927, which up to this have not been in operation in Dublin City and County, will, with the passage of the new measure, come into effect in these areas. This will result, amongst other things, in the abolition of the rural district councils in Dublin County and the formation of a County Board of Public Health. The Local Government Acts, 1925 and 1927, were not put into operation in Dublin City and County pending the reforms now contemplated. The putting into operation of these measures will involve certain changes in the procedure regulating roads and the introduction of the more up-to-date sanitary codes set out in the portions of these Acts which relate to public health.

"With regard to the question of poor relief, it appears that it will not be dealt with directly in the new bill."

IRISH AIRWOMAN CRASHES.

'PLANE FALLS ON A FACTORY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

CLEVELAND, Thursday.

Lady Heath, the well-known Irish flying woman, was seriously injured when her 'plane crashed here to-day. She was taken in an ambulance to hospital.

It was stated later that she was in a critical condition. She is suffering from a fractured skull, a broken nose and internal injuries.

The doctors expressed the opinion that her recovery was doubtful.

Lady Heath, who was taking part in the National Air Races here, was flying high above the city when, for some unknown reason, her machine nose-dived through the roof of a factory building. The 'plane came to a halt on the top floor of the building, a twisted piece of wreckage.

The mechanic, Mr. Kirk, was able to extricate himself and escaped with a broken ankle, but Lady Heath, who was apparently lifeless, was dragged out of the wreckage by factory workers.

Further details of the accident show that, with the engine shut off, Lady Heath was gliding towards the landing mark when the aeroplane dropped unexpectedly towards the roof and she had no power to raise it out of danger. One wing hit a wire attached to the factory chimney and the machine crashed through the roof. Kirk, who saw the impending crash, but who was powerless to help, jumped out before the aeroplane hit and landed on the roof. He fractured his ankle and had three fingers severed by a piece of glass.

OPERATION IN HOSPITAL.

CLEVELAND, Later.

Lady Heath was removed later to another hospital, where she was operated on by Dr. Cutler, the well-known brain specialist.

The operation, which was performed at six o'clock this evening—New York time—took more than half an hour. Nothing very definite is yet known concerning Lady Heath's condition after the operation.

A DUBLIN STUDENT.

ATHLETE AND POET.

Formerly Miss Sophia Mary Peirce-Evans, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. John Peirce-Evans, of Knockaderry, Co. Limerick, Lady Heath studied agriculture at the College of Science in Dublin for some years, with the intention of taking up farming in South Africa. In her late student days she gained fame as a woman athlete, and with the development of the aeroplane turned her attention to flying.

Later, as Mrs. Elliot-Lynn, she spent some years in Kenya, and while there wrote a volume of poems dealing with her life in the colony.

During her lone 10,000-mile flight from Johannesburg to Croydon last year she caught sunstroke while in the air, and, although semi-conscious, she managed to effect a landing before collapsing. When later she returned to consciousness she found that she was being attended by natives, one of whom was bathing her head with milk. After the death of her first husband in October, 1927, she married Sir James Heath, the ironmaster.

PIONEER IN AVIATION.

One of the women pioneers in aviation, she was the first woman to loop the loop, to obtain a pilot's ticket, to carry passengers regularly along an air route, and to fly across Africa. In October of last year she broke the world's altitude "record" for light aeroplanes by climbing to a height of four miles. She arrived in the United States last year, where she has flown extensively, and gained the distinction of becoming the first woman to receive an aviation mechanic's licence from the United States Department of Commerce. Recently she took out naturalisation papers in New York.

DUBLIN 'BUS FIRE.

WOMAN DIES FROM INJURIES.

Miss Elizabeth Keating (37), of 3 Reilly's terrace, Dolphin's Barn, died in the Meath Hospital about 5.30 p.m. yesterday from burns received in the omnibus fire at the corner of Meath street and Brabazon street, Dublin, on Wednesday afternoon.

She had been badly burned on the arms, back and face, and became unconscious shortly after being admitted to hospital. An inquest will be held to-day.

Four other persons injured in the 'bus fire were in a serious condition in the Meath Hospital this morning. The condition of the other four was slightly less serious.

At Steevens's Hospital, where there are three of the victims of the fire, two were still in a serious condition this morning. The third, Mary Carroll, was recovering satisfactorily.

STRANGE OCCURRENCE AT DURHAM CASTLE.

WANTON DAMAGE TO PICTURES.

Five paintings hanging in Durham's famous castle have been mutilated by unknown hands, the canvasses of four having been extensively slashed, presumably with a knife. The discovery was made by Charles Sands, a servant at University College, on Tuesday evening, after he and others had been engaged as guides to many parties of visitors. He found a painting by Hastings of the procession of boats on the Wear in celebration of the battle of Waterloo badly disfigured. Further investigation revealed that much more serious damage had been done to other pictures, particularly to portraits of Thomas Gisborne, George Townsend and John Saville Ogle, three Prebendaries, who held stalls in the cathedral prior to the establishment of the University. These paintings, which were ripped across at the base, hang in the great hall built by Bishop Bek in the thirteenth century.

Another mutilated picture is that of Mr. J. Pemberton, founder of the Pemberton Fellowship, one of the earliest graduates at Durham University, and an ancestor of Dr. Pemberton, President of Durham Colleges Council. This portrait, which hangs in the common room, has a perpendicular cut six inches long.

Many visitors passed through the Castle on Tuesday. The authorities are deeply incensed at this wanton destruction, and are at a loss to understand the reason for it. Investigations are being conducted by the police. It is significant that each picture is disfigured at the base.

CLOSING DOWN AT HAGUE.

FINANCIAL DETAILS SETTLED.

THE RHINELAND.

BRITISH CONCESSION TO GERMANY.

The Hague Conference is winding up its affairs. An agreement was reached yesterday morning on political questions, including the evacuation of the Rhineland. It is agreed that the three Powers concerned shall begin the evacuation next month.

It was also announced after the meeting of the six Powers at 7 p.m. yesterday, that an agreement had been reached in regard to the cost of occupation after September 1st, and also in regard to financial points outstanding in connection with the surplus of the last five months of the Dawes plan.

SPEEDING-UP THE EVACUATION.

TROOPS TO MOVE IN TWO WEEKS TIME.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

THE HAGUE, Thursday Morning.

An agreement has been reached between the three Rhineland Powers and Germany on political questions. The report of Mr. Henderson, Chairman of the Conciliation Commission, was adopted this morning.

It has been agreed that the three occupying Powers shall begin the evacuation of the Rhineland next month, and that the Belgian and British troops shall be withdrawn completely within three months of the date of which operations begin.

The French troops will evacuate the second zone within the same time limit. Evacuation of the third zone will begin immediately after the ratification by the French and German Parliaments and the putting into operation of the Young plan, and the withdrawal will proceed without interruption as rapidly as physical conditions permit. In any case, it will be completed within eight months, and not later than June 30.

This agreement is, of course, dependent upon a financial settlement being reached with Germany, and the negotiations on this subject are being continued this afternoon.

MR. HENDERSON'S REPORT.

Mr. Henderson, in his report to the Political Commission, asked the latter to recommend to the interested Powers the setting up of committees under the arbitration agreement concluded at Locarno in order to bring about a friendly and practical settlement of any dispute which may arise between the Belgian and German Governments or the French and German Governments.

If any such difficulty should arise it should be submitted either to a Belgo-German Conciliation Commission or to a Franco-German Conciliation Commission.

This agreement is subject to the reservation that the power of the League Council and Assembly to make investigation under Article 213 of the Treaty of Versailles remain intact. It is also subject to the understanding that each Power which signed the Treaty of Locarno retains the right to lay any difficulty at any time before the Council of the League in conformity with Article 40 of the Treaty of Versailles.

OBSTACLES OVERCOME.

Mr. Henderson, presenting his report, said the question with which the Commission had to deal was of immeasurable importance to the reconciliation of the peoples of Europe and to the understanding between nations upon which in the long run peace must depend.

Continuing, he said: "We are all anxious that evacuation of the Rhineland should be begun with the least possible delay, and that it should be carried through by methods which would make it as rapid as possible, and which would lead to the minimum of friction or misunderstanding.

"In seeking to make an agreement which should meet the various requirements we have some serious obstacles to overcome, but we have overcome the difficulties and we have reached solutions which, I believe, would give general satisfaction to all the Governments and all the peoples who are concerned. Evacuation is to start forthwith. In two weeks from now the troops will be on the move."

Mr. Henderson then announced that Germany had waived her claims for damages in the occupied area, and described it as a wise decision.

UNANIMOUS AGREEMENT.

Unanimous agreement has also been reached on questions arising out of the observance of Articles 42 and 43 of the Treaty of Versailles.

He concluded: "I believe we may hope that to-day we are taking decisions which will mean that from now the World War, with its divisions, with its hatred, and with the clashes of conflicting interests which it left behind it, will soon be no more than an evil memory.

"The path is opening before us for the constructive work of building up the common welfare and prosperity of our peoples upon the firm foundation of stable and enduring peace."

M. Briand, in a short speech, paid a tribute to Mr. Henderson's work in the Commission, and said that a great step had been taken on the path of peace.

Dr. Stresemann thanked M. Briand for having given an assurance that the Rhineland would be evacuated as speedily as possible, and expressed satisfaction that no special form of control had been arranged for the Rhineland.

LAST OBSTACLE OVERCOME.

MR. SNOWDEN'S CONCESSION TO GERMANY.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

THE HAGUE, Thursday Afternoon.

It was announced after the meeting of the delegates of the six Powers, which ended at seven o'clock, that an agreement had been reached in regard to the cost of occupation after September 1st, and also in regard to financial points outstanding in connection with the surplus of the last five months of the Dawes plan.

The decision which was arrived at will be embodied in an agreement which is now being drafted. It is understood that the problem of the cost of occupation after September 1st until June 30th next year has been settled by Germany agreeing to pay 20,000,000 marks, and the three other Powers—Great Britain, France and Belgium—a further 30,000,000 marks on a percentage basis, which has not yet been fixed. It is believed, however, that Belgium will pay three per cent. of this amount.

WHAT BRITAIN RENOUNCES.

In addition Great Britain will renounce 5,000,000 gold marks of her unconditional annuities in favour of Germany.

To-morrow, at 11.15 a.m., the Financial Commission meets in order to deal with its report, which, it is hoped, will be presented to the plenary meeting to be held on Saturday morning, and over which M. Jaspar will again preside.

At 10.30 a.m. to-morrow the six inviting Powers will meet, and there will be an

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE TIMES.

CONCILIATION AT THE HAGUE.

THE ENTENTE REMAINS UNBROKEN.

The Times to-day, in a leading article on "Conciliation at The Hague," says—The intense interest shown by the public in the Conference at The Hague has been concentrated, naturally enough, upon the work of the Financial Committee, where Mr. Snowden's firm and successful defence of the interests of the British taxpayer has been watched so eagerly from day to day.

In the excitement aroused by that grim and protracted struggle the larger issues of Conciliation and Pacification have, perhaps, received rather less attention than they deserve. But the results achieved by the Political Committee, over which Mr. Henderson has presided with such notable tact and ability, have been no less remarkable even if the difficulties encountered have been less obvious and the controversies less spectacular. It has proved, perhaps, not altogether unfortunate that the acrimony of debate which from time to time was perceptible focussed itself upon the financial discussions. It might even be argued that the calmer atmosphere in which the political questions were discussed owes something to this fact.

It is, nevertheless, creditable to all concerned in the political negotiations at The Hague that, amid all the storms and stresses of the financial bargaining, diplomacy has kept a level keel, and yesterday the Political Committee reached complete agreement in the matter of the evacuation of the Rhineland.

MARCHING HOMEWARD.

Mr. Henderson was able to announce that within a fortnight the first British soldiers will be marching homeward from Rhine territory, and that within three months the last of them will have left it. The same time table is to be observed by the occupying troops of Belgium, and in regard to the second zone, the French troops will also have completed evacuation by the end of the year. In regard to the third, or southern zone, the understanding reached between France and Germany is that evacuation will begin immediately after the ratification by the Parliaments of the two countries of the instrument which will bring the Young Plan into force, and that the process of withdrawal will be continued without interruption and be completed not later than June 30 of next year.

The evacuation of the second or central area of the Rhineland by the end of this year will not in itself constitute a diplomatic achievement, inasmuch as it is, in any case, due by the terms of the Treaty of Versailles before January 10 of next year. But it is, nevertheless, in every way satisfactory that an occupation which began as a joint undertaking by the countries which had been victorious in the war is being ended by common action on their part, that a co-ordinated time-table has been established, and that the prospect now is that it will be carried out without misunderstanding in orderly fashion and with a minimum of friction.

This happy co-ordination, which Mr. Henderson has wisely taken pains to preserve, is in itself a convincing disproof of the allegation recently made, not only in the foreign Press, but also in certain circles in this country, that Mr. Snowden's energetic policy has been responsible for breaking up the entente with France.

IN PALESTINE.

DIVIDED RESPONSIBILITY.

Dealing with the situation in Palestine, the Morning Post to-day says:—Another aspect of the problem that must be investigated is that which divides responsibility in the Near East between the Foreign Office, the India Office, the Colonial Office and the War Office. The Near East is one problem, whether in Egypt or in Palestine, and it should be so considered and dealt with. The Government have been so confounded already by events that there is only one safe guide for their policy to follow—and that is national interest rather than party principle.

HAGUE AGREEMENT.

The Daily Telegraph to-day, discussing The Hague agreement, says:—From the point of view of British statesmanship, which has known no differences of party on this subject, the Rhineland agreement is, if not a completely satisfactory one, undoubtedly better than it seemed reasonable at one time to expect. Evacuation of the British and Belgian troops is to begin forthwith. The evacuation agreement may be set off against much that is questionable in the Young plan. The two complete, on paper, the liquidation of the war. The ordeal of ratification remains, and in France, if not in Germany, it is likely to be a sharp one.

exchange of notes regarding the occupation, etc.

It is learned that both Mr. Henderson and M. Briand will leave The Hague to-morrow night for Geneva, and will therefore not attend the plenary session on Saturday morning.

DETAILS OF THE PAYMENTS.

The financial settlement between Germany and Great Britain and the other Powers provides that Germany will pay into a special fund the sum of 30,000,000 marks; France, 21,000,000 marks; Great Britain, 7,200,000 marks; Belgium, 1,800,000 marks—or a total of 60,000,000 marks.

This fund will be used for meeting the cost of evacuating the armies of occupation. If the expenses of the evacuation amount to more than 60,000,000 marks they will be borne by the four Powers. If they are less, the latter will benefit.

It is thus to their interest to evacuate their troops as speedily as possible. Germany has renounced her claim to a share of the 3,000,000 marks Dawes plan surplus. She has also waived her claims to compensation for damage done in the occupied area by Allied troops, and for damage done after September 1st, on the basis of a "wear and tear" clause.

DELIVERIES IN KIND.

She will continue to pay roughly 3,000,000 marks a month for the expense of the administrative staff of the occupying Powers, but this sum will decrease automatically as the evacuation proceeds.

In regard to deliveries in kind, the right to re-export such deliveries in kind is entirely cancelled. Germany will reduce her export of reparations coal to Italy in the first year by 1½ million tons. Great Britain will thus benefit to the extent of one million tons annually.

MR. HENDERSON'S SKILL AND TACT.

THE HAGUE, Thursday.

Both M. Briand and Dr. Stresemann paid warm tributes to Mr. Arthur Henderson this morning. The French Premier, in the name of his colleagues, thanked the British Foreign Secretary for the skill and tact with which he had presided over the Political Commission, adding, "If we have been able not to disappoint our peoples, and if we have been successful it has been largely due to Mr. Henderson, who has shown himself conciliatory, tactful, skilful, and very patient when there have been exchanges of views, which sometimes gave rise to apprehensions."

Dr. Stresemann remarked that sometimes there had been very rough weather in their deliberations, and it was Mr. Henderson's sense of conciliation and goodwill which had helped them through.

PALESTINE MOBS SUBDUED BY TROOPS.

LARGE-SCALE DISORDERS NOW CHECKED.

STATEMENT BY MILITARY CHIEF.

JEWISH RELIEF FUNDS IN BRITAIN AND AMERICA.

"The presence of the troops has produced a steadying effect on the rioters," says a Colonial Office report on the Palestine situation which was issued last night. It is added that the large-scale disorders now appear to have been checked.

KILLED OR DIED OF WOUNDS—Moslems, 52; Christians, 4; Jews, 96.

WOUNDED IN HOSPITAL—Moslems, 103; Christians, 9; Jews, 151.

Large sums are being raised for the relief of the Palestine Jews. Over £20,000 has been collected already in New York. Nearly £40,000 has been subscribed to a fund organised by a Palestine Emergency Committee in London, of which Lord Melchett is chairman.

The Pope having stated that he considered them imprudent at the present juncture, a number of pilgrimages to the Holy Land have been suspended.

SITUATION MUCH IMPROVED.

STATEMENT BY COLONIAL OFFICE.

The following statement on the Palestine situation was issued from the Colonial Office last night:—

As regards the general situation it is reported that yesterday and last night were quiet practically throughout Palestine, and that the presence of the troops has produced a steadying effect on the rioters.

The large-scale disorders now appear to have been checked, and, unless conditions should be changed by circumstances not at present foreseen, the grave situation of the previous five days may be regarded as under control.

About midday on the 27th of August an excited crowd of Moslems assembled in the Haram area in Jerusalem and demanded arms from the Grand Mufti. An immediate menace was avoided by the officer administering the Government receiving a deputation and giving them a formal assurance that the Government had not armed the Jews.

In consequence of this assurance the situation in Jerusalem on the morning of the 28th of August was much easier.

HIGH COMMISSIONER'S RETURN.

STATEMENT BY MILITARY COMMANDER.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

JERUSALEM, Thursday.

The High Commissioner, Sir John Chancellor, is expected to arrive to-day.

The general military command is in the hands of Colonel Dobbie, who is reported to have stated that he now has sufficient troops to deal with the situation.

He also stated, according to the Jewish Telegraph Agency, that he would stop the further evacuation of Jewish settlements, unless there is otherwise real danger of loss of life.

Looters, he said, would be severely punished. Some have already been caught and dealt with summarily.

MORE ARABS AND JEWS KILLED.

Two Arabs were killed in an attack made last night upon the Jewish labour settlement of Kelandia, according to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. The attack was successfully repulsed.

A Jewish girl and a little child were wounded on the road between Ludd and Tel Aviv last night. Two Jews were killed.

An Arab has been murdered in the streets of Jerusalem. Three more houses have been burned in the "Old City."

A Hebron Jew named Moshe Mitovsky has died from his wounds.

An old Jew was walking last night in a street in Haifa when he was stabbed by an Arab in the back.

The unhappy refugees in Haifa are being supplied with food brought under military escort into the town.

The Melhamia and Poria crops have been burned.

THE POPE AND THE HOLY LAND.

PALESTINE PILGRIMAGES SUSPENDED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ROME, Thursday.

The news received by the Vatican confirms the gravity of the situation in Palestine, although it is reported that the holy places are not threatened owing to the vigorous measures that have been adopted.

The Pope to-day received Monsignor Boccoleri, Bishop of Terni, who is leading a group of pilgrims intending to sail for Palestine.

His Holiness remarked that he considered the journey to Jerusalem under present conditions as imprudent, though he did not desire to take upon himself the responsibility of prohibiting it, since a steamer had been chartered for the voyage and a number of pilgrims had already embarked at Naples yesterday.

Future pilgrimages to Palestine have been suspended.

JEWISH RELIEF FUNDS

BIG SUBSCRIPTIONS IN U.S.A. AND BRITAIN.

Lord Melchett is Chairman of a Palestine Emergency Committee which has been set up to relieve destitution in Palestine, to which over £40,000 already has been subscribed. A statement issued on behalf of the Committee last night says:—

"The tragic events in Palestine, involving, as they do, not only heavy loss of life, but also destruction of property and unemployment, the eviction of large numbers from their homes, and the creation of widespread destitution and misery, call for immediate help.

"An Emergency Committee has, therefore, been formed for the collection of funds to enable those on the spot to render, at all events, such first assistance as is immediately needed.

THE RESPONSIBILITY.

"It is not in any sense intended that the formation of this fund should be regarded as relieving the responsible authorities from their present duties towards the sufferers, or from legal claims for loss and suffering which may arise out of recent events.

"The Chairman of the Committee is Lord Melchett, and the hon. treasurers are Mr. O. D'Avigdor-Goldsmid and Mr. Simon Marks. Contributions should be addressed to the The Treasurers, the Palestine Emergency Committee, 77 Great Russell street, London, W.C.1.

BIG DONATIONS.

"Among the donations received are:—Vera Beyce, £10,000; Lord Melchett, Mr Felix Warburg, and Mr. James de Rothschild, each £5,000; Mr. and Mrs. S. Marks and Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Sieff, each £2,000; Montague Burton, Messrs. M. and L. Schalit and Mr. and Mrs. B. Rubenstein (in memory of the late J. Rubenstein), Mr. and Mrs. Norman Laski, Miss M. Marks, and Mr. and Mrs. H. Sacher, each, £1,000; Louis Sterling, £525; Lord Reading and Herbert D. Cohen, each, £500."

£20,000 COLLECTED IN U.S.A.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Thursday.

A non-sectarian Palestine Emergency Relief Committee was organised in New York to-day, headed by the well-known lawyer, Mr. G. G. Battle.

Over a hundred thousand dollars (£20,000) have already been collected in various Jewish relief funds raised in that city.

THE QUICK AND THE DEAD.

HOW JEWS ESCAPED THE MASSACRE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

JERUSALEM, Thursday.

The most horrible stories of murder, rape and mutilation have just been received from the refugees who have arrived from Hebron, says the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. It would be difficult to match such stories of horror anywhere else in modern times.

The stories are well-authenticated, as different people give identical details of the same event; indeed, the victims in hospital are the very best evidence of the ghastly nature of the attack which has reduced the Jewish population of Hebron by one-quarter and has wounded and mutilated another quarter. Physicians, who are hardened to the sight of wounds, say that they have seldom ever seen more gruesome sights.

OFFICER'S NARROW ESCAPE.

A young Jewish boy who ran to the police and asked for help was killed right in front of the police. An English officer who had caught sight of the boy's murderer whipped out his revolver and shot him dead.

The Arab hooligans who had been looking on at once seized hold of the officer, and, had the police not at once charged the Arabs, he, too, would have been killed.

Jews smeared themselves with the blood of their wounded friends as one of the only ways of saving themselves from the maniacal Arabs. Covered with blood they lay on the ground between the dead, and in this way escaped torture and death.

The only other alternative was to hide in Arab houses. One Arab woman hid thirty Jews, and so saved them from certain death.

AMERICAN'S STORY.

On the morning of the "bloody Sabbath" an American student of the Jewish College in Hebron said: "I barricaded my house, seeing that the Arabs meant mischief. I called to an English officer from the balcony, and he at once dispersed the crowd. I then asked if I might be given protection. The officer then put an Arab policeman at my disposal. No sooner had the officer turned his back than the Arab policeman ran away. The Arabs then made an attack upon my house, and I was terribly treated.

"My friend Krasner, with whom I have been studying the Talmud, had his body cut from the throat downwards. He died eight hours afterwards. I only escaped because I was taken for dead. When the police arrived I asked for medical help, but I received it only after five hours."

ARAB CHILDREN AS HOSTAGES.

Bringing their little children with them, the simple fellaheen of the villages near the Jewish Labour Settlement of Kiryath Anavim came to the Jews this morning and offered them their children as hostages of peace.

The Jewish colonists were deeply affected by this sign of friendliness, says the Jewish Telegraph Agency, and it has done much to cool the heated passions aroused by the terrible atrocities committed by Arabs in other parts of the country.

Dr. Korkidi, one of the highly respected surgeons of Jerusalem, was operating upon a patient in the hospital of Misgab Ladach, in the "old city" of Jerusalem, when a shot rang out, and he fell. It is not known whether the wound is serious.

TRAVELLERS' HISTORY OF HORRORS.

MASSACRE, BURNING AND LOOTING.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

CAIRO, Thursday.

One man says that when he reached Gaza early on Saturday morning he heard that serious fighting had occurred on the previous day in Jerusalem. Crowds emerging from the Mosque of Omar, he was told, started trouble near the Damascus Gate, where they entered a house and killed three Jews whom they found inside.

Bedouins from Beersheba were reported to be on the heights of the Mount of Olives and elsewhere.

The trouble spread to Hebron on Saturday morning, when, at about 9 o'clock, a large crowd, composed mostly of villagers from outlying places, attacked a large Jewish house

NAVAL DISARMAMENT.

APPROACHING ANGLO-AMERICAN AGREEMENT.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Thursday.

The long search for a way to check the growth of the American and British cruiser fleets appears at last to be within a measurable distance of success. So close have the Governments of the two countries come to some kind of understanding on naval parity and reduction, that officials here are hopeful that an announcement on the subject may be made within the next fortnight.

A general conference, attended by the major naval Powers, is expected to be held before the end of the year. The progress of the negotiations is indicated by the statement of Mr. Stimson, who announces that no further conferences between Mr. Hoover and the officials of the Navy and State Department are necessary. Long conferences have been held daily at the White House all this week.

WHERE PROHIBITION HAS FAILED.

NEW YORK'S 32,000 ILLICIT LIQUOR SALOONS.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Thursday.

The thirty-two thousand "speak easies" (illicit liquor saloons) in New York have become the subject of an acrimonious public discussion between the New York Police Commissioner, Mr. Grover Whalen, and Mr. Seymour Lowman, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of prohibition.

Mr. Lowman says that the responsibility is Mr. Whalen's, and that he should suppress all the "speak easies" and "bootleggers'" (dealers in illicit liquor) establishments here.

The Police Commissioner, in a spirited reply, says that it is up to the Federal authorities. To close all the "speak easies" in New York; would cost a minimum of fifteen million dollars per annum, and would require ten thousand additional policemen.

PRINCE OF WALES'S LONG WEEK-END.

BACK FROM FRANCE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

LE TOUQUET, Thursday.

The Prince of Wales, who arrived here on Friday for a "long" week-end, left again at 5 p.m. to-day for Croydon. His Royal Highness, emerging at half-past one from the villa near the links, where he has been staying, looked on at a "horse show" reserved exclusively for children on ponies, in which about a dozen young English people were taking part. The Prince seemed much interested, and had a few cheery words for some of the competitors. At half-past three he went back to the villa again, and then set out once more for the Berck Aerodrome. No sooner was he there than his blue 'plane was brought out of the hangar, and Squadron-Leader Don inspected the engine and then took his seat at the controls. His Royal Highness exchanged a few words of salutation with M. Liger, Special Police Commissary, who was in attendance, and then mounted the 'plane, which hopped off at 5 p.m. for Croydon.

FAMOUS FABIANS FLY.

LORD PASSFIELD AND MRS. WEBB IN THE AIR.

Lord Passfield, the Colonial Secretary, and his wife, Mrs. Sidney Webb, made their first flight yesterday at Brooklands Flying School. They motored to the aerodrome with Sir Horace Plunkett, who, although seventy-five, is learning to fly.

Only a single-seater machine was available, so they made their flights separately. Both Lord Passfield and his wife declared that they had enjoyed the experience. Lord Passfield is seventy years of age.

SHIP AGROUND IN BELFAST LOUGH.

The schooner Sarah Evans, of Carnarvon, went ashore opposite Carrickfergus yesterday.

The vessel lay on sand and was apparently undamaged. Communication was established with the shore, but there was no request for assistance, and it was expected that the schooner would refloat on the night's tide.

on the Jerusalem-Hebron road. The Jews were terror-stricken, and immediately retired behind locked gates and barred windows.

Word was passed down to the police at Hebron, who consisted of one officer, an Englishman, and thirty Arabs. On hearing of the trouble, the officer, a Cornishman named Caffarata, proceeded to the scene with his small force, but just before his arrival the gates of the house were opened for some unexplained reason, and two small boys came rushing out screaming.

FAMILY MASSACRED.

They were immediately beaten to death. The mob then surged into the house and killed the other occupants. That was the signal for a fresh outbreak of general rioting and looting, all the Jewish houses down the main road leading to the post office being attacked.

The police were ordered to fire, but their bullets probably went high. Finally, by persistent efforts, they drove the crowd from this quarter, and then managed to collect the surviving Jews and escort them to the police station.

The mob, consisting of from 4,000 to 5,000 persons, then proceeded to the Jewish quarters of the Market place, where they were, however, restrained by the almost unaided efforts of Mr. Caffarata.

By this time word had circulated throughout Jerusalem of the Hebron disturbances, and twelve British policemen and twelve members of the Royal Air Force were despatched from there.

A Royal Air Force lorry arrived at Hebron at about two o'clock in the afternoon, and almost immediately the British force had the situation in the Jewish quarters in the immediate vicinity of the police barracks under control.

A message was also sent to Gaza, where Major Partridge, the officer commanding the district, was stationed, informing him of the trouble at Hebron.

AUTHORITIES' FIRM ACTION.

Meanwhile trouble was brewing at Beersheba, where it was put down by the firm action of Police Officer Miller, who refused to allow the crowds to demonstrate from the mosques.

Demonstrations had also begun at Gaza, but the local police dispersed the crowds, and there was no serious incident, largely owing to the help of an influential local Arab landowner.

Major Partridge drove in hot haste and unmolested in his car from Gaza, and arrived at Hebron at 3.30 in the afternoon, and took over control. He issued an order establishing curfew and warning letters that they were liable to be shot at sight.

At the same time the groups of villagers concentrating outside the town from various directions were dispersed.

HEAVY DEATH ROLL.

By this time the Jews at Hebron conveyed in safety to the police barracks numbered 490. Approximately 60 Jews who had been seriously injured had been removed to hospital. The death roll was then (Saturday afternoon) about 60 Jews and 10 Moslems killed.

On his way by car to Hebron Major Partridge passed large bands of villagers, some accommodated in lorries, evidently intent on looting at Hebron during the night.

Measures were taken to disperse these, and unavoidable casualties were caused amongst them during the process.

In one case over 300 were dispersed by six British police and Royal Air Force men.

One Royal Air Force driver had a narrow escape from death. An Arab drew a sword and slashed at him. The driver ducked in the nick of time, and then shot his aggressor dead.

During the whole of the night of Saturday and Sunday cars were commandeered, patrols were established, and any suspected persons were searched.

TERRIBLE SAVAGERY.

On Sunday morning a survey was taken of the situation, and the gruesome task begun of collecting the dead.

In one house alone nineteen bodies were found. In some cases bodies were hanging from windows, and in others they had been mercilessly thrown into the streets.

In practically every instance death was caused by swords or knives, the bodies being badly cut and knocked about.

Even young children of two and three years of age, many of them girls, did not escape the savagery of the mob.

The killed and wounded at Hebron included a number of American Jews attending a school, where they were being prepared to become rabbis. Twenty-nine of these American students were among the survivors.

A search was also made for all Arabs in possession of loot or arms, or who had blood-stained clothing. In all 150 were rounded up, including fourteen who were discovered in one house full of loot. The owner of the house was a notoriously bad character.

PHLEGMATIC ARAB OFFICIAL.

A curious feature of the Hebron massacre was that during the whole trouble not a single telephone or telegraph wire was cut, and the Arab operators stuck to their posts.

One of them pointed out to his chiefs that it was Saturday afternoon, and naively asked if he could close the office.

A half an hour later he telephoned reporting that he feared danger, as fighting was going on outside the office. He was advised to shut the door, which he did, and then carried on.

The next morning he applied for the return of his Jewish assistants to help him with the sorting, but his request was refused.

On Sunday there was another Arab demonstration at Gaza. The mob attacked a Jewish hotel where seventeen Jews were taking refuge. The police were obliged to fire on the demonstrators, two of whom were killed, and three or four wounded. The Jews were then evacuated to Ramleh and quiet was restored.

TROOPS ON THE SCENE.

On the same day the Zionist Executive Committee of Jerusalem dispatched motor 'buses, escorted by armoured cars, and evacuated seventy wounded Jews from Hebron to Jerusalem.

On Monday 300 more Jews were evacuated from Hebron, and the remainder on Tuesday, when a platoon of South Wales Borderers from Cairo, with Lewis guns, was garrisoned in the town, thereby enabling the police to rush out into surrounding localities to deal with wandering bands.

Mention should be made of the fact that there were cases at Hebron, as elsewhere, where Arab neighbours saved Jews from the fury of the mobs.

Seven Jews were thus protected in a village half-way between Hebron and Jerusalem. Subsequently they were evacuated safely to Jerusalem. In another case two fellow-workers saved the Jewish driver of a steam-roller, and the rather singular spectacle was witnessed of Arab road-menders diligently working although trouble was going on all round them.

SUNDAY IN JERUSALEM.

It is apparent throughout that there has been no direct hostility to British officials carrying out their duties.

By Sunday Jerusalem had considerably quietened down, and control of the town was well established. This task was greatly facilitated by the enrolment of all British residents, who were given uniforms and arms and—what was the most distinguishing of all—a helmet with the blue puggaree of the Palestine police.

It is probable that if Mr. Best, the passport officer, had not been so conspicuous in the forefront of the forces of order he would not have been killed.

Owing to the darkness of the night, to anyone bent on looting, full advantage was taken of the opportunity, and the military guard was unable to prevent it as they could not occupy every house.

A sad case in Jerusalem was that of a British sergeant-major who returned home from duty only to find his wife and child lying dead with their throats cut.

OUTBREAK IN JAFFA.

Troops and armoured cars had arrived in Jerusalem and quiet was restored by Sunday night, except for some sporadic attacks against outlying Jewish villages, whose inhabitants had already taken refuge elsewhere.

Trouble broke out at Jaffa on Sunday morning when crowds of villagers attacked Tel Aviv, the modern Jewish suburb. They were driven off, however, by the police.

In an outlying Jewish suburb all the inhabitants, except one person named Green, with a loyal Arab servant, had evacuated their houses, leaving them a prey to the looters.

Mr. Green's servant, who was subsequently found squatting on the doorstep of his master's dwellingplace taking his early morning meal, was spotted by the military guard, who fired at him, thinking that he was a looter, whereupon the unfortunate man fled and was last seen scurrying towards Jerusalem.

A serious situation developed when mobs gathered in the main square at Jaffa and attempted to burn down the offices of the Governor.

AT THE POINT OF THE BAYONET.

A detachment of South Wales Borderers was obliged to charge, and the crowds were soon dispersed at the point of the bayonet.

Shortly afterwards a detachment of marines from H.M. cruiser Sussex arrived, and they, together with a party of bluejackets, took over the protection of Jaffa and Tel Aviv. The Tel Aviv municipal police were disbanded, and the curfew was vigorously enforced.

Daybreak on Wednesday was heralded by the arrival of the aircraft carrier Courageous, which landed 700 men of the South Staffordshire Regiment and ten or twelve aeroplanes. The latter proceeded to Ramleh Aerodrome, from where they are making continuous reconnaissance flights.

HOUSES BURNED AT HAIFA.

The first serious outbreak of trouble at Haifa occurred on Monday, when a few Jews were killed. Fortunately, however, details from H.M.S. Barham quickly got control of the situation.

Another outbreak occurred at Haifa yesterday morning, when some Jewish houses were burned.

Troops have now been quartered in the districts of Nablous, Beisan and Tiberias, and the whole situation is hourly improving. During the night of Tuesday a certain amount of action was necessary to deal with looters on both sides of the railway between Ramlth and Gaza.

It is further reported that Bedouin sheiks in the Bersheeba district have informed the district officer that they were unable to control their followers—they were determined to have a share in the looting.

HUNDREDS DEAD IN INDIAN FLOODS.

MANY VILLAGES DESTROYED.

From Reuter's Correspondent.

KARACHI, Thursday.

New floods of the Indus are causing grave destruction. A report from Multan states that Dera Ghazi Khan is threatened with destruction and that many villages in the district have been completely swept away, involving the destruction of the complete crop.

There is a great loss of livestock, and it is feared that there is a loss of three hundred lives.

Reports from Attock state that already villages on the banks of the Indus and Kabul rivers have been washed away, with, it is feared, a great loss of life.

A similar fate has happened to many villages in the Nowshera district, and road communications between Rawalpindi, Peshawar and Murree Kashmere are impossible owing to submerged roads, landslides and breaches in the banks.

ENGINEERS CONFER.

An emergency meeting of the irrigation engineers here to-day announces that the effect of the new Attock floods in the direction of Sind cannot be estimated on the present data, but they state that the danger seems much greater than in regard to the recent Shyok floods.

It seems that the record Attock flood, coming down on top of the rising and already swollen river, may cause an unprecedented inundation if the waters are not dispersed before reaching Sind.

Kotri, where the waters are now within two feet of the top of the banks, is gravely menaced. Mirpurkhas is flooded, and more houses have fallen in.

It is learned from Hyderabad that the breach at Korshah, on the Upper Sind frontiers, has submerged a vast area. A serious breach near Shahwahs has totally submerged several villages.

DAMAGE TO CANAL SYSTEM.

From Reuter's Correspondent.

SIMLA, Thursday.

The Punjab Government declares that the Indus, Jhelum and Chenab have been affected by the flood which is now gravely endangering the canal system. The flood at the Mangla headworks, in the Upper Jhelum, is ten feet above last year's serious flood. Similarly the flood at the Khanki headworks, on the lower Chenab Canal, is higher than last year's "record" flood, and there is a risk of serious damage to the headworks of the canal system.

It is feared that there will be considerable loss of life and damage to property, etc., in the river areas, particular anxiety being felt for the districts of Muzaf, Fargarh and Deraghazi Khan, where the embankments have already been damaged by the recent flood.

Warnings were given to all the districts concerned in good time, and all steps were taken to warn those who were threatened, and to watch over and strengthen the protective works.

TRADES' UNION CONGRESS.

NEXT WEEK'S BELFAST MEETING.

The Trades' Union Congress will hold its sixty-first annual gathering in Belfast next week. Elaborate arrangements are being made to provide accommodation in the Grosvenor Hall for nearly seven hundred delegates from all parts of the British Isles who will attend the Congress as the representatives of two hundred trade organisations with an affiliated membership of over four million workers. The President of the Congress this year is Mr. Ben Tillett, M.P., and the greatest interest will be taken in the proceedings. This is emphasised by the great demand for Press accommodation.

Councillor Dawson Gordon is Chairman of the Belfast Reception Committee, which will present to each delegate a handsome souvenir in the shape of a guide book to Belfast and Northern Ireland. The book has covers of Irish linen, bearing artistic designs illustrative of the chief industries of Northern Ireland.

To-morrow evening there will be a reception in the Co-operative Hall, which has been arranged by the Reception Committee.

In the Independent Labour Party Hall, there will be a Miners' Federation of Great Britain delegates' conference, and, in the Central Hall, Rosemary street, a conference on national housing, at which Mr. Ben Tillett will preside.

A CONGRESS SERVICE.

On Sunday, there will be a congress service conducted in the Grosvenor Hall, and later a Labour demonstration in the Empire Theatre. Congress opens on Monday with a civic welcome by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor (Sir William Coates, Bart., D.L.), after which the business proper will be embarked upon, there being two sessions daily, with the exception of Wednesday, on the afternoon of which day there is to be a motor coach tour through the Glens of Antrim.

From eight to ten on Thursday evening there will be a civic reception by the Lord Mayor in the City Hall. Local branches of the various trades organisations are entertaining their own delegates in various ways.

A meeting of the General Council of the Trade Union Congress was held yesterday in the Grand Central Hotel, Belfast, to deal with ordinary routine business, and congress arrangements generally. There will also be a session on Saturday.

Mr. Ben Tillett, M.P., President, along with Messrs. George Hicks, Vice-President of the Council, A. B. Swales (ex-President), A. H. Finlay and Walter McCitrine (General Secretary) reached Belfast last Wednesday evening, having travelled from England via Holyhead and Kingstown, the remaining members of the Council arriving in Belfast yesterday morning.

It is now thirty-six years since the congress last met in Belfast, and the President on that occasion was Mr. S. Munro (Typographical Association).

KILMAINHAM JAIL CLOSED.

FALL IN PRISON POPULATION.

PHŒNIX PARK MURDERS RECALLED.

By the issue of a statutory order by Mr. James FitzGerald-Kenney, the Free State Minister for Justice, closing Kilmainham Prison the existence of one of the most historic prisons in Ireland has been terminated.

For some time past the jail had been unused, and such an order making the closing definite was daily expected. The special reasons for the action are that it is desirable for the purposes of economy and efficiency in the administration of the prisons system in the Free State to reduce the number of prisons, and that sufficient prison accommodation is available elsewhere. A similar order has been made in relation to Kilkenny Prison, which, along with Kilmainham, has been for some years unoccupied. The reduction in the number of existing prisons which, if not operative, were costly, because of establishment charges, has been brought about principally because of the expense in maintaining separate institutions throughout the country and because of the steady fall in the prison population in the country.

FEWER PRISONERS.

This latter fact is borne out by a statement made some time ago to an Irish Times representative, that "in 1914 the average number in prison in the present Free State area was 1,350. To-day it is not much more than half that figure." The latest available returns give the population of these prisons as approximately 650. There has been a very marked decrease in the prison population for years past, as will be seen from the following figures:—

In 1914 the total was 1,350
1928 " " " 700

The centralisation of services, it is well known, has been considered for some time past subsequent to a reference to expense in the Dail. With the abolition of these two prisons the remaining institutions for detention of adult persons in the Free State are:—Cork, Maryborough, Limerick, Sligo, Galway, Waterford and Mountjoy.

The ancient walls of Kilmainham Prison shall no more resound with the steady march and tramp of prisoners as in the days of long ago, when some of the most famous characters in Irish criminal history were confined there. It is a grey, gaunt building, laid out in a fashion to enable discipline to be easily enforced in normally peaceful times. The largest staff ever maintained there was twenty warders, two chief warders, a governor, medical officer, and two chaplains. So "popular" was it with criminals that it was named "Kilmainham hotel," and in the days of the Land League Charles Stewart Parnell was confined there along with William O'Brien and others. The inmates then "lived like lords," for the ordinary convicts were removed from the building to make room for the superior type of prisoner associated with the land trouble in this country. The great hall where the prisoners used to toil, making boots, mats, etc., was converted for the comfort of the new arrivals into a dining-room, spotlessly clean, and instead of the usual heavy sighs of a penitent existence was heard the merry laughter of the Land Leaguers. These were allowed all the facilities of an ordinary hotel, prison discipline not being rigidly enforced, and prisoners had only to remember that they were "confined to barracks."

THE PHOENIX PARK MURDERS.

Mention of Kilmainham, of course, recalls the Phœnix Park murders in 1882, which were reckoned as the most cruel crimes in the history of Ireland. It was behind the small entrance gate of the jail, over which there are peculiar designs cut in the stonework of five scorpions knotted round one another, that the "Invincibles," as the murderers called themselves, were confined after their capture, and subsequently paid the penalty for their atrocious crimes on the scaffold, which to this day stands in the prison, and is only slightly decayed with the passing of time. The five men executed lie beneath the flagstones in a nameless grave. On the morning of the executions the scene at the jail was one remembered for many years. A huge concourse of people occupied every available inch of space of ground around the grey walls of the prison. The bridge and the sloping banks of the orchard close by were looked upon as excellent vantage points to witness the last act of this piquant drama. In the civil war many internees were confined there for periods, and some went to the execution scaffold, but the story, a painful one, has been told many times or the actual happenings are too recent for repetition.

VERY HIGH WALLS.

The jail, which takes its name from the township, is surrounded by a very substantial wall of Irish limestone, built higher than is generally to be found enclosing Irish prisons. The more modern portion of the spacious buildings was built about sixty years ago. Originally, Kilmainham was the County Dublin jail, and was for both males and females. It was utilised for the reception of untried prisoners from the County and City of Dublin; for sentenced prisoners from County of Dublin, and also for convicted and remanded prisoners from a number of neighbouring counties.

FUTURE USE.

No definite decision has been arrived at as to what use will be made of the buildings. On inquiry at the offices of the Ministry of Justice an Irish Times representative ascertained the interesting information that if the buildings are not utilised for State service they will, twelve months after the issue of the order, revert to the local authority, which would be the City Commissioners of the Borough of Dublin in the case of Kilmainham, and the Kilkenny County Council in the case of Kilkenny Prison.

Asked whether there was any intention to use the prisons for State service, an official said that they might be used temporarily as military barracks or as broadcasting stations. St. Mary's Female Prison in Cork, for instance, was now being used by the Department of Posts and Telegraphs for a broadcasting station.

The Board of Works and the Ministry of Industry and Commerce had been asked if they could use the prisons, but so far nothing has been settled upon. It may be taken, however, that some public use will be made of the premises within the next twelve months.

OBITUARY.

REV. E. M. MORGAN.

The Rev. E. M. Morgan, formerly Senior Roman Catholic Chaplain to the Forces, died at 3a Carlisle place, London, S.W. 1, yesterday, says The Times.

The Rev. Emmanuel Maria Morgan was born in 1853, the son of Mr. Edward C. Morgan, and was educated at Douai and St. Edmunds College, Ware. After ordination, in 1877, he was appointed Chaplain to Sir William Throckmorton, and in 1881 he entered the Army Chaplain's department. He was soon to see active service, when, with Father (later Bishop) Brindle, he accompanied the expedition to Khartoum for the relief of General Gordon. He next served with the Sudan Frontier Force, from 1884 to 1886. He had the distinction of travelling in the first transport to South Africa for the Boer War, and of returning in the last, having served throughout the campaign. He was twice mentioned in dispatches, and was present at the engagements at Modder River, Magersfontein, Ladysmith and Colenso.

No sooner had Father Morgan returned than active service again called him to the Somaliland campaign, in 1903, when he was again mentioned in dispatches. He then returned, and was appointed Senior Chaplain to the Forces, retiring in 1915.

On the outbreak of the Great War he volunteered for service again, and was sent, in September, 1914, to France, where he remained until 1917, and was rewarded with the C.M.G. On his return to England he was appointed Chaplain to the Kitchener Hospital at Brighton.

Father Morgan was well known to all Army ranks, and received into the Catholic Church the late Sir John Cowans. He was also well known to Catholics on the Riviera, as he lived in Mentone each winter.

ECHO OF TROUBLED TIMES.

BISHOP FOGARTY TELLS OF AN ESCAPE.

The Most Rev. Dr. Fogarty, Roman Catholic Bishop of Killaloe, who will celebrate his Episcopal Silver Jubilee next Wednesday, in the course of an interview in the Clare Champion, tells of a "providential escape" he had during the troubled period. The Bishop states:—"When Mr. Lloyd George first showed his anxiety to come to terms of peace with Ireland, Archbishop Clune was invited by him to intervene. Mr. Lloyd George suggested that Dr. Clune should see Michael Collins and Arthur Griffith and some others, and added that the interview would be more likely to be fruitful if the Bishop of Killaloe were asked to assist at it."

Following the suggestion, Archbishop Mannix wired to Dr. Fogarty telling him that Dr. Clune would be passing through Dublin "on matters of business," and would like to see him at the Gresham Hotel. Dr. Fogarty then wired to Dr. Clune, the time of whose arrival in Dublin was uncertain, stating that it would be inconvenient for him to go to Dublin, and inviting Dr. Clune to come to Ennis.

A NIGHT JOURNEY.

No reply to this wire was received, and for twenty-four hours Dr. Fogarty was greatly perplexed as to the best course of action. Knowing the Archbishop's mission and the great issues at stake, he determined that there should be no failure owing to any default on his part. No trains were running from Ennis at the time, the only available one being a train passing through Limerick Junction. The Bishop knew that, if he went by the ordinary road to the junction, he would probably be "held up" and foiled in his effort to meet Dr. Clune. Therefore, late at night he sent for Dr. John MacClancy, of Ennis, and in the doctor's car set out at a late hour and by devious routes. Arriving at Limerick City he put up for the rest of the night in St. John's Hospital.

RAIDERS IN BISHOP'S HOUSE.

The Bishop goes on to tell how, while he was asleep in St. John's Hospital, four men with blackened faces visited Westbourne, the Bishop's house in Ennis, at one o'clock in the morning. The housekeeper, Miss Murray, since dead, admitted them in response to loud knocking at the door. They asked for the Bishop, and when they heard that he had left the previous evening they seemed greatly disappointed.

IN A DUBLIN HOUSE.

The Bishop adds:—"On the following Sunday evening I was in a certain house in Dublin, which I need not name. The news of the raid on my house in my absence had already appeared in the newspapers. Mick Collins, who knew everything, dashed into the room where I was and, after saluting me, said, 'Begorra, my lord, you had a narrow escape.' 'I wonder who they could be?' said I, referring to the men with the blackened faces. 'It's no use speculating,' said Mick, 'because they may have gone down from Dublin.'"

A "GEORDIE" TRAMP IN DUBLIN.

30,000 MILES IN ONE VOYAGE.

To the average landsman the tramp steamer seems almost a fascinating creation of fiction. He is willing to believe that such vessels actually exist, but has a vague idea that they are only to be found plying their romantic trade somewhere on the other side of the world. It will surprise many such people to learn that a typical tramp has been lying for some days within one mile of O'Connell Bridge, down in that terra incognito which most citizens only penetrate in taxi cabs on their way to the cross-Channel steamers.

Her name is the Wearpool, of West Hartlepool, and she belongs to the firm of Ropner Brothers, owners of a famous fleet of tramp steamers. The Wearpool has been almost eight months on her present voyage, and will return to her home port on the Tyne at the week-end. Her crew are thankful that this voyage has been so short, for tramps are away for a indefinite period, often as long as two years.

In the last few months the Wearpool has touched at American, Chinese and Japanese ports, has twice crossed the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and the Caribbean and China seas. The vocabulary of her seamen has been enriched considerably by "pidgin" English and American slang. Her crew have sampled Japanese saké, Chinese samshow and American "hootch," and paid for their drinks in yen, and Chinese, American and Canadian dollars. They have travelled in rickshaws, sampans and jitneys, and wandered through the odorous alleys of ancient China and the hustling streets of modern America.

FROM TYNESIDE AND ELSEWHERE.

Most of her crew are Tyne-siders or "Geordies," as they are known in sea-faring circles, but an Irish Times representative discovered that the cook was a Swede and the bos'un an Esthonian, and saw an undeniable Arab emerge from the stokehold. Tell-tale signs of the length of her voyage were not wanting—the experienced eye could pick out the boots made in Shanghai, the American dungarees, with their copper rivetted pockets, and the blue American working shirt. The third mate, while describing the voyage, nonchalantly rolled cigarettes with tobacco bought in Portland, Oregon, and thin cigarette papers from Japan.

The Wearpool sailed from South Shields last January, but broke down about 250 miles west of Land's End. She returned to Barry Dock, in South Wales, for engine-room repairs, and left again four days later. The Wearpool was only in ballast, and the Atlantic in winter for a "light" ship is an unpleasant experience. Encountering heavy weather at the start, she rolled, pitched and wallowed her way across, with everything movable sliding and bumping from side to side. A wet blanket under the tablecloth on the cabin table and "fiddles" had to be employed to prevent the plates from flying off. "Fiddles" are boards about three inches in height which divide up the table into compartments about eighteen inches square. Continually shipping "green water," life-lines were rigged along the decks, to which the deck hands clung whenever a heavy sea came aboard, thankful to escape with nothing worse than another soaking.

As they got South the weather moderated, until yellow weed on the surface of the water showed them in the Gulf Stream. Shoals of flying fish skimmed away in terror, and scores of shimmering many-coloured "Portuguese men o' war" dotted the surface of the sea. The Panama Canal, with its mighty concrete locks, Pedro Miguel, Miraflores and the rest, formed the next stage of their journey. West Indian negroes manipulated the hawsers as she was towed through the locks, while the American soldiers who garrison the canal zone lounged on the green lawns, watching them pass. And so up through the Pacific, with its shoals of turtle, along the coast of California, up through Puget Sound, between pine-clad mountains to Vancouver, British Columbia—after a fifty days' passage.

One week spent loading timber, and then thirty-eight days to Shanghai, calling at Mororan, in Japan, for bunkers on the way. From Shanghai to Portland, Oregon, coaling at Karatsu, in Japan, where coal dust and cherry blossom were equally in evidence. Back through the canal to Norfolk, Virginia, to bunker again, and on to Cork, and from Cork to Dublin, to discharge bulk grain.

In a few days the Wearpool will be "paying off" in the Tyne, and her crew will scatter to their homes, with their Japanese tea sets and ivory and brass curios. Two turtles bought in Japan failed to survive the voyage. They were inadvertently left on board in Portland when the Wearpool was fumigated with cyanide! Before their untimely decease they led a very happy life on the after well deck, which had been flooded to act as ballast. When first perceived by the chief engineer they caused great excitement. It was assumed that they had been sucked aboard by the donkey pump.

The crew of the Wearpool will have a very short spell ashore. Long before the end of September her rusty sides will have been chipped, scraped and given a fresh coat of paint. Her crew will have "touched the pen," and she will once more be outward bound, probably on a long voyage this time. The last only extended some thirty thousand miles.

WORLD CIRCLED BY ZEPPELIN.

LAKEHURST, NEW JERSEY, Thursday.

The Graf Zeppelin brought her voyage round the world to a triumphant conclusion this morning when at 8.13 she came to rest at the air port here.

The airship, her silver form glistening in the light of the morning sun, made a beautiful picture over the Hudson River, when she finished her flight over New York City and turned to resume her journey to Lakehurst. The vessel was accompanied by the usual flock of aeroplanes, and was greeted by thousands of early risers in the metropolis with cheers.

When the Zeppelin arrived at Lakehurst she drifted slowly over the edge of the Naval Reservation and pointed her nose towards the mooring post. Four hundred and fifty sailors and marines, who had been awaiting her for the previous two hours, eagerly seized her landing ropes when they were dropped, and it was soon possible for the passengers to disembark. The weather was ideal for berthing the vessel, and she was soon safely ensconsed in the hanger.

SPEECHES BROADCAST.

Immediately after landing, Dr. Eckener, the German Chargé d'Affaires at Washington, Lady Drummond Hay, Lieutenant Richard Sheridan, United States Navy (assistant navigator of the airship), and others broadcast brief speeches from a microphone at the hangar. Dr. Eckener said that he was very glad to be able to use his poor English in expressing gratitude for the magnificent reception given to them by America. He stated that but for the co-operation of the navies of the United States and Japan the flight would not have been possible.

Dr. Eckener and the Chargé d'Affaires also spoke in German. The broadcast was picked up and relayed from Daventry, and was very clearly heard in Dublin. It was 1.25 p.m. in Dublin when the announcement was made that the landing had been successfully accomplished.

A message was read from the President of the United States, welcoming Dr. Eckener and congratulating him upon his achievement. "It has been a great adventure," the message concluded, "and marks another stage in the progress of aviation."

TWO NEW "RECORDS."

Two "records" are claimed by the Zeppelin: firstly, that she is the first airship ever to complete a "round the world" flight and that she has taken passengers on the fastest world-circling trip ever accomplished. Her time—twenty-one days seven hours thirty-four minutes—surpasses by two days seven hours forty-seven minutes the "record" established last year by the two Americans, J. H. Mears and C. B. D. Collyer. Her actual flying time was eleven days twenty-three hours thirty-three minutes.

She is expected to leave for Germany on Sunday.

The Graf Zeppelin has flown some 16,000 miles odd since she left Friedrichshafen on August 15. Her first stop was at Tokyo, some 7,500 miles, which she reached on the 19th and left on the 22nd. The next halt was at Los Angeles, an ocean flight of 6,000 miles, completed on August 26. The same day the airship left for New York, another 2,500 miles.

The official time for the Zeppelin's flight to and from the Statue of Liberty is given as twenty-one days five hours thirty-five minutes.

Dr. Eckener said in an interview that no special difficulties had been encountered on the trip, and the journey had been completed without mishap or misadventure. The exciting adventure at Los Angeles, when the Zeppelin narrowly missed the high tension electric wires, was entirely his own fault and due to a miscalculation of air temperature. It could not be termed a mishap, and the Zeppelin actually missed the wires by ten feet.

DISCORDANCE ON BOARD.

The trip was enlivened for some of the passengers by jazz music, played on a phonograph by Mr. William Leeds, the son of the "Tinplate King" and the husband of Princess Xenia of Greece. Some of the more classically-minded passengers, however, are reported to have objected strongly to the noise, on the ground that it kept them awake at night.

Dr. G. Megias, the physician to the King of Spain, is said to have sent a message twice a day to the King, "who is most enthusiastic about the Zeppelin flight."

Dr. Eckener announced that he will not return to Friedrichshafen on board the Graf Zeppelin, but will spend twelve days in the United States, and will visit Washington before returning to Germany.

THE LATE SIR HENRY FORDE.

IMPRESSIVE SCENES AT FUNERAL.

A striking tribute was paid to the memory of the late Sir Henry Forde at the funeral which took place yesterday from Waterford station to John's Hill Cemetery. A vast concourse of citizens, representative of all classes and creeds lined the quays and precincts of the railway station awaiting the arrival of the remains. The coffin was borne from the platform to the waiting bier outside by six guards and checkers of the Great Southern Railways. A bodyguard of twenty men of the British Legion, Waterford Branch, preceded the bier, headed by Major Carew and under the command of Colonel Sir Edward Garraway, C.M.G., all wearing crepe armlets with a white cross. Eight Legion members acted as pall-bearers behind the coffin, which was covered with a profusion of wreaths. The chief mourners, Dr. Forde, Mr. Frank Forde (brothers), Major W. G. Fletcher and Captain Corkery (sons-in-law), Lady Forde, with her daughters, Mrs. Corkery and Mrs. Fletcher, occupied the first carriage.

Behind the chief mourners walked the directors of Messrs. R. and H. Hall, Ltd., including Mr. F. H. Hall, Captain Hall; and Messrs. Thomas W. H. Davies, George Ridgway, representing the directors of Messrs. Vickers (Ireland), Ltd., the directors of the Great Southern Railways; Messrs. Graves and Co., Ltd., Waterford; representatives of the Clyde Shipping Co., Great Western Railway, and London, Midland and Scottish Railway. The Mayor and officials of the Waterford Corporation attended in state. They were followed by the Waterford Harbour Commissioners, the President and members of the Chamber of Commerce, the employés of the Great Southern Railways, and the Waterford Harbour Commissioners.

At Christ Church Cathedral a short Service was held. The Right Rev. Dr. Millar, in a brief oration, referred to the esteem in which the deceased gentleman was held by all classes in Waterford. It was only fitting that his remains should be interred in the city to which he had given such distinguished service.

A very large number of wreaths were sent. The Civic Guards, under Superintendent Meehan, regulated the traffic along the funeral route and outside Christ Church.

The Waterford Corporation, Chamber of Commerce, Harbour Commissioners, and British Legion have passed resolutions of sympathy on the death of Sir Henry Forde.

STOCKS CLOSE STRONG

NEW YORK, Thursday.

Stocks opened irregular. Railroads furnished an impressive leadership in response to excellent current earnings, and Pere Marquette soared 30 points before reacting, while a dozen others advanced 1 to 10 points. Buying in the general list had a rather selective character, Utilities, Chemicals and Food issues showing several points of strength, with American Water Works, Air Reduction, International Harvester and National Lead rising 1 to 15 points. Steels, Motors and Coppers generally recorded only small advances, while some Utilities and Merchandising Stocks were well bought in the final dealings. Selling in advance of the holiday and publication of the weekly brokers' loans figures was fairly well absorbed, although a sprinkling of issues fell 1 to 3 points. Call money was in comfortable supply at 9 per cent.; but banking opinion is divided as to whether the heavy holiday and month-end demand will send up the rate, or whether sufficient funds will be attracted to effect a recession in the rate. Auburn Motors early advanced 40 points, but reacted later. American Type Founders' Stone, Webster, R. H. Macy, North American and Simms' Petroleum rose 8 to 14; Pere Marquette 19, and Atchison Topeka, American Tobacco "B," Columbia Carbon, Standard Gas and Electric, American and Foreign Power, A. M. Byers, Proctor and Gamble and Allied Chemical 5 to 7 points. On the other hand, Midland Steel Products Preferred declined 9, Homestead Mining 13, Goodyear Tyre 3, and General Asphalt 5. The market closed strong.

Money on call closed steady at 9 per cent. bid and 9¼ per cent. asked. All business was transacted at 9 per cent.. Prime mercantile paper 6 to 6¼ per cent. Sterling exchange steady. Silver unchanged at 52⅝c.

WHEAT opened easy and ⅝c. to 1c. lower owing to a smaller reduction in the Argentine acreage than was expected, together with large Argentine shipments and some further hedge selling. The market rallied afterwards, due to a recovery in the Liverpool and Buenos Ayres markets and reports of some important export demand. A promise of Government aid for farmers, along with the steadier cash situation and reports of a sharp decrease in South-Western country offerings assisted the rise. The close was firm.

GROWING APPLES IN IRELAND.

CONDITIONS SAID TO BE FAVOURABLE.

EFFECT OF RAIN ON CROPS.

LONDON, Thursday.

How weather knowledge is of especial importance to fruit production was discussed at the conference of Empire Meteorologists at Burlington Gardens to-day.

Mr. H. V. Taylor, O.B.E., Horticultural Commissioner, Ministry of Agriculture and Fishery, considers that this work is of much importance in Ireland, and the accumulation of climatic data will be of much importance in the future development of the fruit harvest, especially apples.

Apples are grown in very many countries, and their susceptibility to the influences of varying climates has been well tested.

"Because the apple tree flourishes, and gives satisfactory crops under very different conditions, it may be thought that this crop is little affected by climate; but actually the tree is influenced to a very marked degree," said Mr. Taylor. Investigations at Bristol University have shown that three distinct stages in tree growth can be recognised from this study. It is suggested that to be in a fruitful condition the growth of the tree should cease early, so that reserves of food material may be stored within. Late summer growth, which is the result of excessive rainfall, depletes the food reserves of the tree, which should be kept for buds.

The general conditions of growth in wet countries are particularly applicable to Ireland, said Mr. Taylor. The extended autumn growth in wet seasons, which are a feature of the Irish climate, plays an important part in rendering trees unfruitful; for this continued growth uses up the food material and prevents the tree producing the food reserves which are so necessary for flower and fruit production.

FORECASTING THE CROP.

The crop of growing apples also makes heavy demands on the food material, and has a definite relation to the summer rainfall. Mr. Taylor showed how it was possible from study of these two factors to forecast with some accuracy the size of the crop to be expected.

There are certain exceptions, but by regulating the manurial and "water factors" in the right direction it may even be possible to throw trees into continuous cropping. An alteration of the "water factor" can be effected temporarily by withholding manure and other factors.

It is hardly possible to grow fruit successfully for market in a district receiving anything in excess of 40 inches of rainfall. At between thirty and forty inches fruit may be grown, but the orchards are mostly on the Gran orchard principle. There is much scope here for Ireland; for the best fruit districts are those with an average rainfall not higher than thirty inches.

LIGHT INTENSITY.

In conjunction with summer rainfall, light intensity also has great influence on the internal condition of the tree, and together these factors govern its fruitfulness.

Tree-growing in a soil abundantly supplied with summer moisture and with a medium light are more likely to have a greater root activity in absorbing nitrogenous substances and to manufacture relatively less amounts of carbohydrates. Trees, especially those growing in the West, are more likely to respond to such manures as potash, which helps the plant in some unexplained way to make the most effective use of sunlight, than to dressings of nitrogenous manures alone.

A correct balance between the amounts of carbohydrates and nitrogenous substances is an essential condition as to fruitfulness of the tree, and the management of orchard fruit resolves itself into an adjustment by pruning, manuring or cover cropping of the inequalities produced by the natural soil and the prevailing weather in each locality.

Analysis of the soil provides little information as to its suitability for fruit-growing, and rainfall and sunshine are the most important factors.

Mr. N. B. Bagenal, Kent, pointed out that it will be necessary to multiply meteorological observation stations very considerably to obtain the necessary data by which this method of forecasting the yield of apples can be accomplished.

The removal of hedges was advocated by Mr. H. Goude, Horticultural Superintendent, Norfolk. After all, they are only boundaries, and it would be better to plant wind screens to protect not only fruit trees, but all crops.

Mr. A. H. Lees, University of Bristol Horticultural Research Station, Long Ashton, insisted that summer rain had a great deal to do with fruiting the following year. The work at Long Ashton is being continued, giving special attention to this matter.

Amongst the various resolutions considered by the Conference was one deciding to extend the scope of meteorological work throughout the Empire, paying especial attention to the furtherance of fruit fields.

DERAILED GOODS WAGONS BLOCK MAIN LINE.

A heavily-loaded mineral wagon after having left the rails was pulled for nearly a mile along the London and North-Eastern Railway main line near Northallerton yesterday, tearing up the permanent way and finally crashing into a signal and breaking it in two.

The train was eventually stopped, but not before some fifteen wagons had been derailed. These piled up broadside fashion across three sets of rails, and it was only by diverting the traffic that the service could be continued. It was several hours before the normal service could be recommenced.

DOG'S TRAGIC VIGIL.

William Donald White (25), a farmer's son, of Frome, Somerset, was found dead yesterday in a field with a double-barrelled gun underneath him. He had been shot in the head. The dead man's dog was sitting by the body. Three hours previously a shot was heard, but no notice was taken of it.

On the celebration of their diamond wedding yesterday Mr. and Mrs. William McLeod, of Ancoats, Manchester, received a letter of congratulation from the King and Queen. Mr. McLeod, who is 78, was well known as a prize fighter in his younger days. His wife is 79.

SALT OR FISH

To-day the spring still runs with their choice—salt. A monument to the necessity of salt to man, a necessity now supplied so ably by the pure, free-running—

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

FAILURE OF TEACUP.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.
YORK, Thursday Night.

This has been an afternoon when most things but the expected have happened. There was, for instance, the crashing failure of Teacup in the Gimcrack Stakes, where he was beaten before they had gone half-way, and finished sixth of the seven runners. I find some extenuating circumstances for his defeat in that he was in a terrible muck of sweat before he left the paddock, and no one who had seen him go out would have thought of backing him afterwards. He was well away, but faded to nothing at the end of three furlongs.

Last of the Dandies was then running well, but at the distance Sir Abe Bailey's Roral began to hold him, and he beat him a length and a half. Nevertheless Last of the Dandies, a son of D'Orsay, ran extremely well. In a good Gimcrack field I think, however, he would have been altogether outclassed; but this field seemed to be below the average of other years—a circumstance due to the fact that so many of the likely candidates have been coughing, and could not run.

It was the third Gimcrack which Sir Abe Bailey has won since the war. He intended retiring altogether last year when he sold his horses, but since he returned to England he has acquired a few. He bought Roral from Mr. Cottrill, who trained him for this afternoon's race. Roral was included in a draft of colts which Lord Dewar sent from his stud to the Newmarket sales, and he was sold for 770 guineas.

IN THE HUNTERS' CLASS.

Mr. Cottrill sent him to the show at Islington last spring in a class for horses likely to make hunters, and he was given a second and a premium. He is a nice colt by Abbot's Trace, with considerable racing merit. The much-fancied Aide de Camp did best of the others, and he would have been closer to the winner had he found an opening sooner.

For the defeat of Teacup the Aga Khan, who has had a splendid meeting, had some compensation when Maggi won the Great Yorkshire Stakes by no less than five lengths from the Irish Derby winner, Kopi. I believe that Mr. Joel's horse, who seemed to be wonderfully well in himself, slightly twisted a plate in the course of the race, and this probably contributed to his unexpected defeat, for long odds had been laid on his carrying his 10st. successfully.

Maggi is a son of Pot au Feu, who won a French Derby—I think it was for the Aga Khan—and then after a term at the stud at Highclere was sent to the United States. He has never shown much form, and at the last Liverpool Meeting Sans Changer gave him 30lb. and beat him. To-day he was receiving 24lb. from Kopi, for whom Petard had been started to ensure a good pace in the early stages.

BEARY MAKES THE PACE.

Beary, however, constituted himself the pacemaker on Maggi, and he set off with a long lead, Kopi bringing up the rear. Then, coming into the straight, he was able to take a good pull at his horse, and when the others had established contact with him he dashed off again. Thus he was able to let Maggi run his race in twice, and the tactics were eminently successful.

We had a fine race for the Harewood Handicap, one of the popular sprints of the meeting here. No fewer than nine of the ten runners were backed, the well-handicapped Caraquette being favourite. Lord Beaverbrook's filly managed to make a dead-heat of it with Mr. J. B. Joel's Water Rose after a fine struggle between the pair; Golden Oracle, who was very badly handicapped with Caraquette on their running here in the spring, finishing third, three lengths behind.

Mr. S. B. Joel had his only winner at the meeting when his outsider Kindred won the Lonsdale Welter Handicap by a head and the same from the unlucky Idle Hour and Young Middleton. Idle Hour was favourite from Nicolette and just failed to get up.

Sir Walter Gilbey had his second winner when his Bridge of Earn gelding, Elcho, carrying top weight, won the Lowther Selling Welter by two lengths from High Minded. The five-year-old may not be too sound, but he looked cheap to Mr. Robert Gore for 250 guineas; for he is a touch above plating class, and this was a good-class seller.

Another odds-on chance beaten in the course of the afternoon was Mr. A. K. Macomber's Masked Bandit, who ran for the last race of the meeting—the Fairfield Plate. Gordon Richards rode him, and it was hoped that he would extract at least one race out of the meeting. He moved up in the straight, but Acragus, receiving 20lb., drew away from him, and won readily by three-parts of a length from Tyrano, Masked Bandit finishing third. The winner is a good-looking maiden by Phalaris, whom Captain Boyd-Rochfort trains for Mr. Marshall Field.

This race brought to a close one of the most successful meetings ever held at York, when weather, attendance and the character of the racing were alike excellent.

SELECTIONS.

To-morrow we relapse into the second-class stuff at Gatwick, which will be almost featureless. I think GASHMU might win the Home-Bred T.Y.O. Plate, and NEWBURY the Tilgate Mid-Weight Handicap. The August Handicap Plate should fall to MOUNT HAWKE.

A possible winner at the Scottish meeting is HAT BOX, in the Bogside Handicap.

MALLOW.

RED CLOVER'S FAILURE.

THREE WINNERS FOR M. C. COLLINS.

The concluding afternoon's racing at Mallow, neither from the point of view of the attendance nor the class of the racing, was up to that of Wednesday, and a breakdown in the weather early in the day did not tend to make matters pleasant for those present. The Tailteann Cup, which in former years has often provided some very fine races, on this occasion did not furnish much excitement. It was won by Mr. B. Masterson's Rattling Toi, a very genuine filly, whose running has been remarkable for consistency during the last two seasons.

RATTLING TOI'S CONSISTENCY.

The field for the race numbered only five, and odds were always laid on Red Clover, whose defeat of Golden Lullaby at the Phœnix Park suggested his holding a big chance. He ran right well, but after lying behind in the early stages found the task of making up a lot of leeway in the straight more than he could accomplish. Buckna and Star Eireann had shared the earlier running before Rattling Toi took the leading position, and the last-named stayed on well to ultimately dispose of the favourite by a matter of half a length, with the top-weight, Star Eireann, filling third place. Rattling Toi, as stated, has been remarkably consistent. She finished third in both the Irish Cesarewitch and Irish Cambridgeshire last year, and possibly lost the latter event through running in another race on the day preceding. The win was a distinct score for Mr. Masterson, who trains the filly himself at Kilrush, Co. Kildare. He bought her for a trifling sum, the object being to turn her attention to steeplechasing, and being now but four years old there is plenty of time to exploit her over a country. Should she prove a proficient lepper the future should have many prizes in store for her at the jumping business.

SOUTHERN PRINCE WINS AGAIN.

M. Collins, who trains not far from Mallow, struck a winning vein on Wednesday, when the two-year-old Puca Orda created somewhat of a surprise by beating Tyroe Lady. He followed up this success by winning the Kanturk Hurdle Race with Court Picture, who, after heading Denis Orb two fences from the end, withstood the latter's second challenge in good style. There was little disposition shown to bid for the winner at the ensuing auction, and he was bought in for 55 sovs. Although only three runners appeared for the Mallow Spa Plate the race provided an excellent finish between Southern Prince and Sky Fruit, and those who laid the odds on Southern Prince were kept in suspense until his number appeared in the frame. Both Mr. McKeever on the winner and Mr. Delmege on Sky Fruit gave nothing away in the matter of riding, and the neck verdict just about represented the merits of the respective horses. The proverb that nothing succeeds like success was fulfilled in the case of M. Collins: for in a two-horse race for the Doneraile Plate his own colours were carried first past the post by Swift Bird, while in the last race Some Bridge, also an inmate of his stable, was indulged with a walk-over. Mr. Parkinson, whose Curragh Calling finished second to Swift Bird, subsequently purchased the latter for 100 sovs.

About the best of the races of the afternoon was the three miles steeplechase, won by Sirreus, who, after a great set-to, beat Schomvenir, a winner the previous day. Details:—

OWNER'S FINE REDUCED.

The Stewards of the Jockey Club have reduced to £10 the fine of £50 inflicted by the local stewards on Mrs. E. M. Bell, the owner of Mons Vigil, for declaring the horse a runner for the Hythe Plate at Folkestone on August 12, when neither horse nor jockey was available. The Racing Calendar says that the Stewards of the Jockey Club inquired into the case on August 24, and at the same time considered Mrs. Bell's appeal against the decision of the Folkestone Stewards. Evidence that the filly had met with an accident on the journey, which was not available at the first hearing of the case, was produced. The Stewards considered that Mrs. Bell was to blame for not giving the jockey, P. Connolly, clearer instructions; but in view of the evidence now produced, reduced the fine to £10. They also considered that Connolly was guilty of carelessness in not immediately informing the owner of the accident to the filly, and fined him £5.

GATWICK TO-DAY: PROBABLE STARTERS AND BETTING.

SELECTIONS.

The totalisator will be in operation at both Gatwick and Bogside to-day. At Gatwick the August Handicap is the principal event, but it is not expected that there will be more than half a dozen competitors. Newmarket will be represented solely by By-Word, who has failed in each of his four previous races this season. Goldicote may run well, as should L.T.V., who is an improving colt, and Royal Repose may go close. Tradescant is not a certain runner, but Rose of Athens will be ridden by J. S. Sirett, and she seems to have as good a chance as any, as she proved successful in the Lewes Spring Handicap in June, and is not unfavourably weighted here. The issue should be fought out by Royal Repose and Rose of Athens, and I prefer the latter.

The Home-Bred Two-Year-Old Plate is likely to attract some useful second-class youngsters, and, in the absence of Stingo and Sligo, the best of the probables may be Gashmu and Lady Clarion. Gordon Richards will ride Lady Clarion, who was only a head behind Tullibardine at Bath. Gashmu made all the running when winning a selling race at Newmarket, but he may not be able to concede 1st. to Lady Clarion, whom I select.

BOGSIDE.

TO-DAY'S SELECTIONS.

The Bogside Handicap is the principal item in the Bogside programme. Arran Beg should be stopped by his Stockton 12lb. penalty, and the best of the probables may be Another Duchess, who was beaten at Stockton, but is quite a useful sprinter. The Barassie Plate should be within the scope of Melanippe, who was not disgraced at Wolverhampton.

GALLACHER ANXIOUS TO LEAVE NEWCASTLE.

A sensation was created in Newcastle football circles yesterday when it became known that Hugh Gallacher, Newcastle United's famous Scottish international centre-forward, had made a request during the afternoon to the club secretary, Mr. F. G. Watt, to be placed on the open to transfer list. Gallacher's request is to be put before a meeting of the directors. Only on Tuesday Newcastle United signed another centre-forward in Duncan Hutchinson from Dundee United. Gallacher was secured by Newcastle in 1925 from Airdrieonians at a fee of £5,500, and has proved to be one of the most polished leaders in the game, besides being a most prolific goal scorer.

DERRY CITY F.C.

The negotiations with John Devine, of Southport, have been broken off, and he, with Morris and Randles, of Wrexham, have returned across the Channel. Arthur Fitzroy, the Distillery goalkeeper, has been signed on, and negotiations are proceedings with several other cross-Channel players.

PRESTON SIGN ON FAWCETT.

Desmond Fawcett, the Nelson goalkeeper, has been signed on by Preston North End, and he will play for his new club against Reading to-morrow.

BOXING.

CHARITY TOURNAMENT AT CASTLEKNOCK.

To-morrow (Saturday) evening, at Abbotstown, Castleknock, a tournament in aid of the Rotunda Hospital will be held, and a number of interesting contests have been arranged. Some of the best-known amateurs in Ireland have promised to take part, and four prominent feather-weights in G. Collins, Irish champion; Pte. Clarke, Pte. Walsh and Pte. Brennan will battle for a cup presented by Lord HolmPatrick. Guard Hearns will meet the Ulster champion, Constable Hyland, and the Ulster middle-weight champion, Constable McGurk has been matched with Guard McManus. Pte. Burns and P. Burns, Army and Irish bantam champion, respectively, should furnish a contest well worth witnessing, a remark that applies to the old rivals, W. Wright and I. Millar. A start will be made at 6 o'clock, an hour which will suit those who also wish to take in Phœnix Park races.

Programmes and Selections for all Irish and English Meetings for one week from day of issue appear in "THE IRISH FIELD," published every Saturday. Price 2d. Subscription terms:—Yearly 13/-. Half-yearly 6/6. Post free. Payable in advance. Head Office—11 D'Olier street, Dublin.—(Advt.)

ALL-IRELAND CLUB.

MR M. ARNOTT'S TEAM, 5; MR. SHACKLETON'S TEAM, 4.

In defeating Mr Shackleton's team by one goal at the A.I.P.C., Phœnix Park, yesterday, Mr. Arnott's team gave a brilliant display, and thoroughly deserved their victory. It was a splendid game to watch. Rain fell just before the start, and continued throughout the game, but the ground held well, and there was any amount of hard galloping. On the winning side, Mr. Slocock was at the top of his form, his hitting being especially good. Mr. Arnott, too, has seldom played a better game, and Herr von Dehn, who hit a couple of goals, and Mr. Durack, were always prominent. The losers hit it off well as a team, but they were beaten in the last chukkar. Mr. Larminie, who was their outstanding player, scored two goals. Mr. Shackleton played a faultless game at back, and Mr. Lillis and Mr. Lawlor were also very good.

Mr. Arnott's team scored in the first minute, Herr von Dehn turning in a shot by Mr. Durack, but, galloping off from the throw-in, Mr. Lawlor equalised. Mr. Arnott's team, however, soon went into the lead again, as shortly after the throw-in Mr. Arnott himself hit through. Play was at midfield when the chukkar ran out. In the second chukkar Mr. Arnott had a good shot stopped by a pony, but Mr. Durack, who was backing up, got on to score. Mr. Arnott's team kept up the pressure until just before the bell, when Mr. Larminie went away in possession from midfield, and finished the movement by scoring a splendid goal.

Following some even play in the third period Mr. Shackleton eventually set his side going, and Mr. Lillis equalised with a straight shot. Mr. Shackleton's team got down from the throw-in for Mr. Larminie to give his side the lead. Mr. Arnott's team were attacking at the bell. Early in the fourth chukkar Mr Arnott got in a long shot from the right, but the ball was cleared from the posts by Mr. Lillis. Mr. Slocock was then called upon to clear, but in the next minute Mr. Arnott hit a good goal, to equalise. Mr. Durack sent wide as the bell rang.

Mr. Shackleton's team—Mr. J. P. Lawlor, Mr. P. J. Lillis, Mr. J. P. A. Larminie and Mr. J. W. Shackleton (back).

Mr. Arnott's team—Herr von Dehn, Mr. Maxwell Arnott, Mr. J. J. Durack and Mr. E. S. Slocock (back).

Umpire—Mr. W. Fitzgerald.

YACHTING.

HOWTH SAILING CLUB.

The 17-footers' handicap on Wednesday evening was sailed in a south-westerly breeze, which gave no windward work over the club course.

There were six boats out, and they started on practically level terms—Leila, Zaida, and Bobolink at the weather end of the line, and Rita, Echo, and Anita at the lee. The Island mark was made on a reach, and here Leila, led with Zaida close up. At the Portmarnock mark, unfortunately, Zaida, after gybing, fouled Bobolink and retired. Echo was now second to Leila, and so it was to the finish. Rita showed improved speed, and took second prize on the handicap, and Anita was well up at the winning line. Finish:—

Leila (3rd club)—Mr. W. MacBride (1 m.)	7	44	21
Echo (1st club)—Mr. R. Hall (2 m.)	7	44	35
Rita (2nd club)—Mr. A. O'Reilly (2 m.)	7	45	17
Bobolink—Mr. R. N. Guinness (1 m.)	7	45	33
Anita—Messrs. Keatinge and Fisher (1 m.)	7	46	40

OCEAN YACHT RACE.

SANTANDER, Thursday.

The result of the Ocean Race is now known, and Maria Del Carmen wins. The second yacht, the French Ailee, crossed the finishing line at 10 hours 10 mins. 30 secs., and the famous English schooner, Cetonia, at 11 hours 4 mins. 19 secs. The allowance of both these vessels had run out, and so has that of the fourth competitor, Serva la Bari, which has not yet come in, so that Sener Echevarrieta's boat is officially declared the winner. Great satisfaction is felt here, as he is locally very popular, and his fine seamanship much appreciated, his having got fourteen knots out of the Kaiser's old boat being held to be a very fine performance.

LONG VACATION V. MR. J. B. WALKER'S XI.

This match was played in the College Park yesterday on a soft wicket, in drizzling rain and bad light, and resulted in a win for Mr. Walker's team by 21 runs.

The visitors batted first, and lost four wickets for 29. Twamley (12) and Balmer put on 20 for the fifth, and H. Whiteside batted well for an hour for 23, hitting a 6 into the Rugby ground and 2 fours, and was ninth out at 96, the innings ending at 109. Of seven bowlers tried, Kenay had 3 wickets for 29, Tom Dixon 2 for 8, and Pat Dixon 2 for 21.

Long Vacation, though handicapped by fielding and batting two men short, looked like pulling it off, when, after two wickets had gone for 17, the brothers Dixon became associated. T. Dixon had 4 fours in his 33, batting half-an-hour, the third wicket adding 35. P. Dixon got 40 in fifty minutes (5 fours), and six wickets were down for 87; but the innings ended at 88. Smith took 4 wickets for only 17 runs. Score:—

WIESBADEN, Thursday.

The Rhine Army cricket XI., which is touring Belgium and Holland, set up a new seventh-wicket stand record at Brussels in the match with the British Sports Club. Lieutenant R. E. C. Goff (2nd Dorsetshire Regiment) and Warrant Officer Frank Smalles (Army Educational Corps), brother of the Army hockey international, became partners at 121 for six wickets, and put on 106 runs. The Rhine Army won by an innings and 10 runs.

GLOUCESTER V. HANTS.

Fine bowling feats by Kennedy, Newman and Parker were the outstanding features of the cricket at Cheltenham. The pitch was all in their favour, and they made full use of it. Kennedy, indeed, took eleven wickets for 110, while the figures of the other two were correspondingly good. Going in for a second time wanting 163 to win, Hampshire lost Newman with 19 scored. Only rain is likely to save Warwickshire to-day; for, after leading by 205 at the half-way stage at Taunton, Somerset finished 495 runs ahead, with two wickets in hand. The bowling of White and Jack Lee, and a great first wicket partnership of 146 by Young and Longrigg, was chiefly responsible for this. Score:—

COMIC DOG SHOW AT KILKENNY.

A comic dog show was held at St. John's College grounds, Kilkenny, yesterday, but the weather was very inclement, and prevented the fixture from being a success as far as the attendance went. There was a very large number of entries, and the various competitions proved most amusing. The expert dog fanciers who attended must have been surprised at the large variety of "breeds." There were dogs of all shapes and sizes—big dogs and little dogs, dogs of all colours and colourless dogs, and dogs to make one wonder whether they really belonged to the canine race. At the conclusion Lady Kathleen Pilkington distributed the prizes, and Sir Otway Cuffe, Bart., called for three cheers for Lady Pilkington, which were heartily given.

Mr. Robert Lanigan's entry won the prize for the dog with the shortest tail; Mr. A. Furness's dog was awarded the prize for the animal with the most sympathetic eyes; the dog with the best tricks is owned by Miss E. Booth; the smallest dog belongs to Mrs. W. Hall. The race for dogs with owners attached was won by Master John Drennan; the fancy dress parade was won by Miss Eileen Bourke; the three-legged race with dogs by Mr. James Hughes; the egg and spoon race with dog, by Miss B. Hyland; the blindfold race by Mr. James Hughes. The prize for the dog with the longest legs was won by Mr. J. Purtis's entry.

COMPSTON HEADS THE LIST.

Archie Compston, twice winner of the first prize, headed the list of qualifiers from the Southern Section at the R.A.C. course, Woodcote Park, Epsom, yesterday, in connection with the £1,040 Tournament. Perhaps, by reason of his achievements of the past, Compston's feat of totalling 141 for the thirty-six holes of Wednesday and yesterday attracted less notice than did the twenty-five years old John Donaldson, until recently assistant to another East Lothian man, William Watt, at the scene of yesterday's struggle. The local professional had held the lead over the field, but his erstwhile pupil took all the attention when, with 67 he placed himself ahead of all until Compston shouldered his way to the front to the extent of one stroke.

Only a few months ago Donaldson became a fully-fledged professional with the neighbouring Cuddington Club.

Donaldson improved by two strokes upon the joint record of Charles Whitcombe and Henry Cotton on Wednesday. Charles Whitcombe, the holder, made himself safe when he came in fairly early in the day with a round of 75 for a total of 144, and, curiously enough, he tied on the aggregate with last year's runner-up, T. H. Cotton, on the complete series.

Past winners of the competition proper who got among the twenty-nine elect for Wentworth were: Abe Mitchell, George Gadd, Reginald Wilson, and Ernest Whitcombe, as well as the veteran, J. H. Taylor. On the other hand, James Braid had to go out in the replay late in the day, and his compatriot, "Sandy" Herd, was among the failures.

IRISH OPEN AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

133 ENTRIES.

Entries for the above Championship closed yesterday with the Hon. Secretary of the Golfing Union of Ireland.

The total number of entries received for the Championship is 133, which is the highest number since 1910. The previous best was 132, at Portrush in 1919, and 130 at Portrush in 1925. Out of the total entry this year one-half of the entries are cross-Channel golfers.

For the stroke competition to be held on Friday, the 6th September, 106 entries have been received.

MARRIAGE OF MR. D. E. B. SOULBY.

Mr. Donald E. B. Soulby, the Irish Close Champion, was married yesterday at St. Anne's-on-Sea Parish Church, Lancashire, to Miss Queenie Eltoft, a well-known local golfer and holder of the Lady Derby Cup. Mr. Soulby has played a conspicuous part in the principal golfing events on both sides of the Channel. In addition to carrying off the Irish Native Championship two years in succession, he won the Lancashire County Championship (1924), the Open Amateur Championship of Belgium (1923), the Swiss Championship (1924), the Welsh Open Amateur Championship (1925), and was runner-up to R. McConnell in the Irish Open Amateur Championship in 1927.

NEW AUSTRALIAN CHAMPION.

M. J. Ryan (Victoria) won the Australian Amateur Golf Championship at Adelaide yesterday. He defeated Sloan Morpeth, the present New Zealand Open Champion, by 2 and 1. Morpeth earlier defeated Ivo Whitton, four times Open Champion of Australia, after a great match which went to the 42nd hole. Ryan, who is 28 years of age, has been playing golf only three years.

GERMAN AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

COLOGNE, Thursday.

T. A. Torrance (Sandy Lodge) won the German Open Amateur Golf Championship at Frankfort to-day. In the 36 holes final he defeated W. A. Murray (West Hill), the holder, by 6 and 5. The two Scottish golfers, who have represented Great Britain, gave an interesting display.

HOWELL RETAINS WELSH TITLE.

Henry R. Howell, of Glamorgan, recorded his fifth win in the Welsh Amateur Golf Championship when, at Southerndown yesterday, he defeated Roger Chapman, of Newport, by 4 and 3 in the 36 holes final. Howell held the title in 1920, 1922, 1923 and 1924, but his opponent was making his first appearance in Welsh championship golf. In 1927 Chapman was reserve in the Cambridge University team.

T. P. PERKINS FOR AMERICA.

T. P. Perkins, of Castle Bromwich, the former amateur golf champion, will leave England for the United States on September 21. It is understood that he will take up a business appointment in New York. Perkins will make his last appearance in competitive golf in England at Blackwell on September 9, when he will represent the Castle Bromwich Club in the Midland Amateur Team Competition. It will be recalled that Perkins, after winning the British Amateur Golf Championship in 1928, when he defeated Roger Wethered at Prestwick by 6 and 4, went to America, and after taking part in the "Walker" Cup match between Britain and America, competed in the American Amateur Championship, with considerable success, reaching the last round, in which he lost to "Bobby" Jones.

MOTOR CYCLING.

INTERNATIONAL SIX-DAY TRIAL.

A DIMINISHING FIELD.

MOUTIERS, Thursday.

The three British teams in the international six days' trial suffered their first casualty yesterday, when Miss Edyth Foley, following her collision with a cyclist, in which she sustained a grazed face, had the misfortune to get several punctures, and this chapter of accidents made her so late in arriving at Pallanza yesterday that the British women's team for the International Vase was eliminated from the contest. There are six British women still in the race as individuals, and the German girl, Fraulein Kahlr, has ridden very well up to now.

The gradually diminishing field, which now numbers about 140 riders, started out from here at seven this morning to Lake Orta on good, but sinuous, roads, which presented no abnormal difficulties. From Andorna to Rozazza, however, the riders had a severe test in ascending via St. Giovanni to the tunnel of Rozazza, an altitude of 5,000 feet. Here the road was merely a narrow, rocky, grass-grown track, covered with many loose stones and full of hairpin bends.

Many riders took their lives in their hands and charged up recklessly what was easily the stiffest climb of the trial to date. The women were quite undaunted by the nature of the road, and, following the example of the men, they conquered the ascent with the same iron nerve that has marked their riding throughout.

The luncheon halt was made at the sanctuary of Oropa, the enclosure made by these picturesque ruins of ancient Roman civilisation being used as a parking place for the machines of the competitors.

LAWN TENNIS.

JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

IMPROVED PLAY.

With the elimination of the majority of the weaker competitors, the play in the Junior Championships at Wilton place yesterday showed considerable improvement. J. Monahan and R. J. Sandys, winner and runner-up last year, have both reached the semi-final round of the senior boys' singles with victories over G. P. Sheehan and E. H. Barry respectively. Although Sheehan only won five games in two sets against Monahan, the match was always interesting. The winner improved considerably on his recent form, and gave a really good exhibition of tennis. Superior speed of stroke constituted his chief advantage, his powerful fore-hand drives finding a weak spot on his opponent's back-hand. Sandys met with surprisingly weak opposition from Barry, who has played in many tournaments this season, and as a result seems to be suffering from "staleness." The other two to reach the semi-final stage are L. McLaughlin and A. O'Reilly.

In the senior girls' singles Miss J. Harman achieved a notable success by defeating a strong opponent in Miss S. Moore. This young Cork player holds the junior girls' title, and, as she is still eligible for, and has reached the final round of this event, she seems to have a very good chance of carrying off both titles. Attempting no fireworks, she relies on clever placing, and combines a rock-like steadiness with good anticipation. Her opponent to-day will be Miss E. Makin; while the other semi-final will be contested by Miss B. Pringle, the holder, and Miss E. Pelly. Details:—

TILDEN AND HUNTER BEATEN IN SEMI-FINAL.

BROOKLINE, MASS., Thursday.

G. M. Lott and J. H. Doeg to-day qualified for the men's doubles final by defeating F. W. Tilden and F. T. Hunter in four sets. The other finalists are Berkeley Bell and L. H. White, who beat W. F. Coen and H. Coggeshall also in four sets. Lott and Doeg are ranked second as a doubles pair in the United States, but the scoring shows that Tilden and Hunter are by no means a spent force as doubles players, the margin of games in their opponents' favour being only five.

BILLIARDS.

M'CONACHY STILL GOING AHEAD.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

Willie Smith, who has been playing competitive billiards for nearly three months without more than a day or two of rest at the most between his matches, is evidently tiring under the strain. He is not doing himself justice in his match with Clark McConachy, which is virtually the last of his Australian programme. To-day Smith fell behind a further 400 points, scoring only 638 to McConachy's 1,050. Smith left off in the afternoon with 318 (unfinished), which he brought to 340, and this was his only break of note. McConachy's best during the day were 292, 275, and 344. Present scores:—Clark McConachy (in play), 8,051; Willie Smith, 5,449.

GREYHOUND RACING.

HAROLD'S CROSS PARK.

There was some keen and interesting racing at Harold's Cross Park last night, and the majority of the winners were well fancied candidates. That consistent dog, Rathganly, won the second heat in the second round of the Irish Grand National. He jumped splendidly, and leading virtually all the way, won by a length from Texas. Merry Falcon, with odds of 5 to 2 laid on, won the first heat, and getting well away, the son of Kashmir Kernel was never headed. Hell of a Toff won the Leinster Plate in ready fashion, while Hand Grenade was an easy winner of the Munster Plate, in which Next Kiss put in a good spurt in the straight. Details:—

WHITE CITY OAKS.

BEWITCHING EVE WINS THE FINAL.

The final of the Greyhound Oaks was run at the White City, London, before a good crowd, who witnessed a very fine race. Melksham Edith got out of the trap first, but was dispossessed of the lead at the first bend, where Bewitching Eve came through on the rails. Bradshaw Fold ran into second place on the back stretch and raised the hopes of her supporters, but Tullykin Lass passed her at the last bend, and looked as though she was going to run Bewitching Eve very closely. The latter, however, ran on in extremely game fashion, and in the end won comfortably. Details:—

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

TONE AND COMMENT.

DUBLIN UNCERTAIN.

MARGARINES AGAIN.

Stagnant and featureless markets largely preponderated on 'Change yesterday, but, as on other days of the week, there were important exceptions. Margarines "boomed" again despite substantial realisations. Guinness Ord. were lower, allowing for the dividend and bonus just deducted, owing to quite a number of sales by those who were waiting for the ex dividend price to secure profits. Government National Loan hardened ⅜, but Land Bonds 4½ per cent. passed slightly under 90. British Funds eased ⅛ to ⅜, but there was no change in the official discount rate. Among Banking securities, Bank of Ireland Stock was still on sale and weakened further. Munster and Leinsters and Royals were both harder, but Hibernians and Nationals closed steady. Guinness Ord. closed 9d. lower for reason given, but the Preference at a bound recovered the whole of the half-year's dividend just deducted from the price. J. Power and Son Pref. were steady ex dividend. Cables "A" Pref. gave way again. Rails were all more or less bid for. Leading Tobaccos eased, especially "Bats," but British Match Shares were carried upwards. Textiles were easy, but Chemicals finished harder. Margarines, though under best, closed still higher. Irish-American Oil Pref. improved.

LONDON DOUBTFUL.

BRITISH FUNDS DULL.

Rather quieter conditions characterised the London Stock markets during the early hours of yesterday, while uncertainty regarding the Bank rate led to an irregular commencement. The announcement later that no change was to be made failed to revive markets to any marked extent, general opinion being that the rise was only being postponed. There were, however, several active and strong features. Among Mines, Kaffirs attracted considerable attention and higher levels were registered, while Colliery issues strengthened on the publication of excellent all-British coal export figures following those issued recently for Wales. The Margarine issues also continued firm, but the best values in these were not held, mainly as a result of pessimism regarding the monetary outlook. Gilt-edged securities displayed a dull appearance, and while actual price movements were few, those recorded were in the downward direction. Idle conditions continued in foreign Government Stocks, and apart from an advance of a point in Poland Sevens, the final values were much the same as previously. A somewhat easier tendency was apparent in Home Rails, and, following the recent spurt, values were marked back the turn in several directions. Colonial and Foreign Rails made a steady showing, while Americans were marked appreciably firmer in a number of instances.

INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

FURTHER ADVANCE IN CARRERAS.

FLUCTUATIONS IN MARGARINES.

While the general tendency of the Industrial Market yesterday became irregular, several bright spots were again noticeable. Quite a satisfactory turnover was reported among Electricals, the feature being Associateds, which gathered fresh strength, following the report of an important Egyptian railway contract. Influential buying of Carreras issues continued on dividend and bonus anticipations and other interesting developments. Margarines attracted further attention, finishing, however, under the best, with Lever issues and African and Easterns also in favour.

For reasons stated, Associated Electrical went ahead, closing 2s. 3d. to the good at 48s. 6d. Of the other Equipments, General Electrics rose 1s. 6d. to 56s. 6d., with Callenders wanted at 74s. 9d. General Supply shares met with renewed inquiry, the favourite being County of London, which finished 1s. 6d. up at 57s. 6d. A mixed showing was made by the Canadian-American group. Hydro Electrics opened good at 82¼, but a fair amount of profit-snatching followed, and they eventually closed at 81, which left them at a net loss of ⅞. Brazilian Tractions eased at one time to 72⅞, but recovered later to 73¼. International holdings reacted ¼ to 14 and Nickels ⅜ to 56⅜. On the directors' decision to pay a further year's arrears of dividend on the B Pref. shares, Austin Motor issues came in for renewed attention; B Pref. changed hands up to 11s. 6d., while the 20 per cent. Preferred Ord. were dealt in up to 6s. 3d. Other Motor shares moved irregularly. Leylands had buyers at 57s. and Rolls Royce at 2 5/16.

Colliery and Engineering descriptions generally maintained a fairly firm front. On views expressed by Mr. H. S. Horne, a moderate recovery was witnessed in the shares of the Red Triangle group. Anglo-Atlantics attracted purchasers, and were dealt in up to 20s., finishing 2s. 6d. to the good at 17s. 6d., while the Defd. gained 6d. to 2s. 9d. In the Cement group, Allied Cements rose 6d. to 5s. 3d., while British Cement Products had a steadier appearance, and left off fractionally better at 1 5/16; the Defd. moved up 2s. 6d. to 10s. Movements in the Banking section were of small dimensions. Among Insurance descriptions, Guardians reacted to 10⅜, while Phoenix fully paid at 14⅞ and Royal Insurance at 8¼ both shed ⅛. Shipping shares were featureless. Cunards and Peninsular and Oriental Defd. proved moderately active, but left off without quotable variation, while Royal Mails finished unchanged.

The outstanding feature in the Tobacco section was the continued demand for Carreras, the A shares further advancing to the extent of 7/16 to 15⅜, and the B 1s. to 38s. 9d. A little profit-taking was noticeable in Bats, the final quotation of 6 11/32 leaving them 3/32 easier on the day. Imps closed steady at 5 1/32 ex-div. There was not a great deal doing in Breweries, apart from Distillers, which closed buyers at 75s. 6d. Allsopp Ord. recovered to 30s., with Bass, Benskins, Ind Coopes and Guinness quietly steady, the last-named at 4 5/16 ex-div. Watney Defd. remained on the dull side at 58s.

Most of the interest in the Food Supply section was directed to Margarines, but after establishing new peak levels they finished below the best on profit-taking. The Unions eventually closed at 6 11/32, after changing hands at 129s. 6d., and the Unies at 131s. 9d., after business at 134s. 9d. Liptons continued active, but closed without net change at 6s., after 6s. 3d. Maypole Dairy Defd. hardened to 5s. 7½d., United Dairies to 33s., Home and Colonial to 17s., and Schweppes Defd. to 37s. 6d. A renewed demand sprang up for Aerated Bread, and the price advanced 1s. 3d. to 23s.

Little further interest was taken in Textiles and Rayon issues, where movements seemed undecided. Both Bradford Dyers and J. and P. Coats were quoted ex dividend, with Patons and Baldwins the turn easier at 27s. 6d. Of the Artificial Silks, British Celanese Ord. hardened at first, only to come on offer at the close at around 1 19/32. Courtaulds remained around 3⅝. Among the Record shares, some bear covering was noticeable in Metropoles. At one time the price was lifted to 6s. 6d., eventually closing at 6s., which left them 1s. 9d. up on the day. The Pref. improved 1s. 3d. to 7s. 3d. Vocalions continued in the ascendant, putting on 3/16 to 1 9/16, the Foreign finishing buyers around 6s. 3d. Of the leaders, Gramophones (H.M.V.) eased slightly to 7 9/16, while Columbia Graphophones gave way to 13 9/16.

Cables and Wireless remained steady, but Marconi Marines gave way to 2⅞, and Radio Corporations to 95. In other directions African and Easterns enjoyed good business on pending developments, and closed 2s. 9d. to the good at 20s. 6d. Lever Pref. issues also continued in request, the Sevens rising to 23s. 7½d., and the Eights to 23s. 9d. The Swedish group seemed rather uncertain again. Imperial Chemical Ord. hardened further to 34s. 10½d., and Dunlops had buyers at 18s. 6d. Argus Holding Prefs. were marked down 9d. to 19s. 3d. on the appearance of a seller, and Metafilters again closed with the loss of a few pence at 18s.; while Marco Refrigerators had an undecided appearance, although they were maintained at around 2s. 10½d. Zinc Manufacturing "A" changed hands in good numbers, but finished without variation on balance at 1s. 6d. premium.

OIL SHARE MARKET IRREGULAR.

As on the preceding day, interest in the Oil Share Market centred in only a few specialities, among which Royal Dutch, Shells, and the Eagle issues commanded the bulk of attention. The amount of local business was again small, even in these shares, transactions being almost entirely professional, and on behalf of centres, such as New York, Amsterdam and Paris. Other descriptions were again overshadowed by the activity in the shares mentioned above. Venezuelans had an easier tendency, rather as a result of neglect than from selling pressure, while Trinidad, Rumanian, and Miscellaneous issues in most cases can hardly be said to have opened. At the close the price movements recorded were of a slight and irregular character.

RUBBER SHARES QUIET.

Quiet conditions again prevailed in the Rubber share section, but despite a reaction in commodity values share quotations were well maintained, while here and there higher levels were reached. A fair request was forthcoming in the raw material, but after initial firmness quotations fell away, spot easing from 10½d. to 10 7/16d. per lb., October to December from 10 11/16d. to 10⅝d. per lb., and January to March from 11d. to 10⅞d. per lb.

TOBACCO RUMOURS.

One of the rumours in regard to the rise in Carreras Shares is that a majority of the late Mr. Baron's private holding may be acquired by the British-American Tobacco and allied interests. "Bats," of course, are concerned with overseas trade only, but it may be mentioned that Carreras have a growing export trade, and of late have gained good ground in the American market.

LOANS FOR FARMERS.

FERMANAGH DEPUTATION TO BELFAST.

A deputation of County Fermanagh farmers waited upon the Northern Minister of Agriculture, the Right Hon. Sir Edward Archdale, and the Northern Minister of Finance, the Right Hon. H. M. Pollock, in Belfast yesterday with the object of trying to obtain a long-term loan to farmers to assist them in their present difficulties. The deputation was introduced by Captain T. H. Verschoyle, Tullycreagh.

The Ministers gave a sympathetic hearing to the views of the deputation, and promised to place the matter before the Prime Minister and other members of the Cabinet.

Guy Butler, the famous runner, only son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Butler, of Bitton, Somerset, was married at Upper Weston, Bath, yesterday to Edith Dalzel Sherer, elder daughter of Colonel and Mrs. John Sherer, of Bath.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

IRON AND STEEL FIRMS TO AMALGAMATE.

PROBABLE £30,000,000 FUSION.

It became known in Middlebrough yesterday that negotiations are practically completed for an amalgamation of certain North-East Coast iron and steel firms, having a total capital of between £20,000,000 and £30,000,000. The principal firms concerned are stated to be Messrs. Dorman, Long and Co., of Middlesbrough, and Messrs. Bolckow, Vaughan and Co., of Middlesbrough, who, with other firms between the Tyne and the Tees, will form a North-East Coast iron and steel combine, which will have as its ultimate object a fusion of interests and working agreements between all the iron and steel manufacturers concerned on the North-East Coast. In a statement issued yesterday the directors of Messrs. Dorman, Long and Co. announced that the negotiations had reached a very advanced stage.

MARKET "GROUP" MOVEMENTS.

Some of the rumours current on the Stock Exchange often have no foundation in fact, but they are sufficient to create a lively interest in the various groups of Stock Exchange securities. The somewhat unexpected announcement of new capital proposals of the British-American Tobacco Company last week-end has been a fruitful source of speculation. No reason was given for the increase in capital, but some people hastily formed the conclusion that a bonus was in prospect. The sharp advance in Carreras shares has also given currency to a new rumour that the B.A.T. wishes to acquire control of Carreras. It is considered in well-informed quarters that the new capital proposals are connected with the requirements of an expanding business. Whatever the reason, curiosity will not be satisfied until the meeting next week. Yesterday also saw a further rise in Margarine issues early in the day, accompanied by advances in Lever Bros. 7 per cent. Preference to 23s. 6d., in the 8 per cent. Preference to 23s. 9d., and business in the 20 per cent. Preferred up to 15s. African and Eastern jumped to 20s. 6d., and British Oil and Cake Mills to 32s. 3d. As regards the Horne group of shares, all sorts of unfounded rumours of an unfavourable character have circulated for some time, causing a severe slump in prices; but yesterday there was a recovery in this group on the reassuring statements made by the chairman in the course of an interview.

COLUMBIA GRAPHOPHONE PROFITS.

A considerably larger profit has been earned by the above company for the twelve months to June 30 last. The amount is returned at £505,121, which compares with a total of £491,305 for the fifteen months to June 30, 1928. With the balance brought forward there is a total available of £763,476. After allowing for the payment of an interim dividend of 15 per cent. on the Ordinary and of the Preference dividend there remains at disposal balance of £582,212. The directors recommend the payment of a final dividend of 30 per cent., making 45 per cent. for the year. This distribution is made on a capital which was doubled last year by the distribution of a capital bonus of 100 per cent., in addition to an Ordinary dividend of 60 per cent. for the fifteen months, so that the present payment is equivalent to 90 per cent. on the old capital. In June this year the company made an issue to shareholders of 427,520 Ordinary shares of 10s. each at a price of £5, these being allotted at the rate of one new share for every complete five shares held, but these new shares do not rank for dividend until after June 30, 1929.

INTERNATIONAL TALKING SCREEN.

Shareholders of International Talking Screen Productions, at the statutory meeting, criticised the directors' actions and finished by passing a vote of confidence in the Board. Mr. G. W. Pearson, who presided, spoke on the failure of sub-underwriters of the share issue to meet their obligations. He said: "We are as angry with the sub-underwriters as anyone can be, because it means that their action has caused us an immense amount of work. We have to do our work all over again, because we have got to sell the forfeited shares again. Immediately after we proceeded to allotment the amount of defaulting underwriting was only 10 per cent., but when it came to the question of the payment of further allotment calls other defaulters appeared." The forfeited shares are to be available at 8s. per share.

TYNE COAL SHIPMENTS.

Total exports of coal from the Tyne, including bunkers and coke, during the week ending August 24 showed an increase of nearly 50 per cent. over the corresponding period of last year. Coal shipments totalled 367,107 tons, against 243,671. Coke shipments were 18,482, against 15,635.

CELANESE OUTPUT.

Mr. George Whigham, chairman of the Celanese Corporation of America, is reported as stating that British Celanese production is over 12,000,000 pounds yearly and all sold. The British company, he points out, weaves a larger proportion of production themselves than the American company does. Mr. Whigham says that no change in the American financial arrangements is contemplated. The United States Tariff Committee have decided to describe rayon as synthetic textiles, thus largely overcoming the objections of the Celanese companies.

A NEW £1,000,000 COMPANY.

Messrs. Jordan and Sons advise the registration of the Lake George Metal Corporation, Ltd., with a capital of £1,000,000 in £1 shares. The company has been formed to acquire lands, mines and mineral properties in the Commonwealth of Australia and elsewhere, and to enter into an agreement with Camp Bird, Ltd., the well-known mining and finance undertaking, of which Mr. F. W. Baker is chairman.

BANK OF ENGLAND RETURN.

The reserve of the Bank of England was further increased this week by £830,000; for while the coin and bullion in both departments was lower to the extent of £568,000, the active note circulation showed a further diminution of £1,398,611. The reserve now stands at £33,588,000, which is fully £26,500,000 less than the amount held at the corresponding date a year ago, while the coin and bullion in the issue department was nearly £37,000,000 lower.

The other securities are £6,552,000 lower, but this movement was off-set by a reduction in the public deposits of £5,768,000, while the Government securities show an increase of £2,230,000. The net result of these movements was an increase in the other deposits, or bankers' balances, of £2,243,000. As a result of the net decrease in the deposit liabilities and the increase in the reserve, the proportion of the latter to the former has risen to 29 5/16 per cent.

MINING SHARE MARKET FLAT.

REACTION IN RHODESIANS.

Markets generally had a rather dull appearance yesterday, a further efflux of gold from the Bank reviving talk of an increase in the Bank rate in the not distant future. The Mining market was no exception, although not entirely devoid of mild features. In the Kaffir circus, Johannesburg again came in a buyer of several of the lower-priced descriptions, the demand being accompanied by vague rumours of possible amalgamation between some of the members of the Central Mining Rand Mines group. Little change was seen in Rhodesian prices during the early hours, business being on a small scale, but later in the day a moderate reaction took place, the most seriously affected being Congo Borders, which lost more than 10s. Bwana and N'Changa fell away, and Rhodesia Katanga eased a fraction. There was virtually nothing to report in Diamonds. De Beers Defd. came back slightly, while Consolidateds held steady.

Despite the further decline in the price of tin, which finished 2s. 6d. lower at £201, quite a good inquiry was received for one or two Tin shares, the demand emanating from the East. The market was none too well supplied with stock, and in consequence the section closed with a brighter tone than has been seen for some time past. The price of copper rose 5s. per ton to £74 1s. 3d. Paris bought Tintos, and, although they finished under the best, there was an appreciable gain on balance. Elsewhere Minerals Separation were lowered as a result of the reaction in Northern Rhodesians. San Francisco and Santa Gertrudis left off higher, as did Waihi Gold, and the Grand Junction Camp Bird did not respond to the news that a subsidiary has been formed to take over the company's interest at Lake George, New South Wales. Closing prices:—

THE MONEY MARKET.

BANK LOSES OVER HALF A MILLION.

Conditions were slightly easier in Lombard street yesterday, both old and new day-to-day money being 4¾ p.c., while towards the close balances were offered down to 4½ p.c. Weekly loans were renewed at 4½ p.c.

Rates were steady in the discount market, with 5 13/32 the general quotation for fine three months' commercial bills. The new Treasuries were offered at 5 7/16 p.c., while the banks were buyers of early November at that figure, September bills being taken to 4¾ p.c. and mid-Octobers at 5 3/16 to 5¼ p.c.

At the Bank of England, bar gold to the value of £526,431 was sold, and £1,262 bought, while 5,000 sovereigns were taken for export. The efflux for the day thus amounted to £530,168; efflux for 1929 to date £18,017,595. Gold valued at £106,000 was embarked at Plymouth yesterday for New York in the French liner Ile de France. The amount of business arranged in the market for bar silver was small, and the spot and forward quotations at 24 5/16d. and 24 7/16d. per oz. respectively, were both unchanged.

The French exchange moved against this country, the Paris rate reacting to 123.85, and part of the previous day's improvement in the American exchange was lost, the New York rate closing a little lower at 4.84¾. The Montreal quotation further receded to 4.88½. German marks were better from our standpoint, and Swiss francs further moved in our favour, but Belgian belgas, Italian lire and Dutch florins were dearer, the Amsterdam rate falling to a little over 12.09¾. Movements in Scandinavian countries were favourable to sterling.

GOOD LINEN TRADE REPORT.

BETTER OUTLOOK FOR BUSINESS.

The fortnightly report of the Belfast Linen Trade issued last night, states that business has been good generally since the last report. Already the Linen Guild Propaganda has resulted in many orders for housekeeping goods in the home trade, and still better returns are expected. Colonial business is up to a good average. So far new orders from U.S.A. are only starting, but at present basis of costing there is little doubt about business coming along. Handkerchief business is good, and large shipments are being made. There has been almost a rush in orders for cambrics and sheer in the piece owing to recent change in bleaching rates.

DRESS LINENS.

A moderate amount of business has been placed for next season for white and coloured dress linens, and the demand in U.S.A. is very much better than at this time last year.

Weavers report that there is a steady business being done from day to day, and manufacturers are confronted with a firm yarn market, which confirms the cloth prices already given, and makes it impossible to give further concessions. The American business has not yet opened in quantity, but some fair preliminary lines have been booked. Home trade orders show more life than is usual at this time of the year.

The spinning section states that backed by a steady demand, the recent improvement in yarns has become stabilised, and as a result prices are very firm. Producers are not disposed to commit themselves, even when tempted with higher rates, beyond possibility of visible raw material cover. The outstanding feature of the situation is the insistence by buyers on delivery dates being strictly observed.

FLAX CROP PROMISES WELL.

The new Irish flax crop is being harvested; a few small samples have been scutched, and promise well, both as to strength and quality.

PRODUCE AND FOOD MARKETS.

Dublin—Cattle supplies large and trade slow; Sheep in demand for good quality; Dairy Cattle trade quiet; Pig market slower. York—Large show good Irish, but slow trade at late rates; Dairy Cattle easier. Bristol—Stores slow trade. Butter at Copenhagen 5/7 dearer. Tin falling. Rubber weak.

CATTLE.

DUBLIN (METROPOLITAN).—Supplies of both branches of market yesterday varied little in numbers from last week, but keep much in excess of our accustomed seasonable outlay. The beast show was considered an unusually poor display of quality and finish for an autumn gathering. Possibly, the fattening properties of the grass has weakened, particularly the softer fresh crop, since summer rains were prevalent, and stock may not be thriving so satisfactory. Nevertheless, many nice drafts of cattle were to be met with here and there on respective stands. Both home and export buyers were again in attendance, but trade continues to be dominated by caution, and even apathy, which, being more accentuated in a general way than before, contributed to make business extremely tedious, and previous money untenable. Altogether, cattle proved a slow and depressed sale, but big half-meated stocks suffered in a greater degree in this respect than most other beasts. There, however, was a ready trade for both small and heavy-weight cattle of quality and finish, which, owing to comparative scarcity, realised last week's terms, and neither London nor Scottish commission men were enabled to draw upon a sufficient number of the right character cattle to cover their requirements, though relatively small, but fancy, selections were required in latter interests. Very large importations of chilled and foreign meat have been arriving in England recently, and a large quantity of fresh meat destroyed by bad keeping and slaughter weather, engendering heavy losses in the trade, and to these circumstances is to be contributed the nervy and cautious attitude of shippers, especially Lancashire habitues. In the ovine department only choice medium weights of mutton and fat lambs attracted anything like satisfactory support. Fair inquiry for medium sorts of shipping hoggets inside a price which many owners hesitate in accepting. Flock masters should particularly note that all sheep coming on this market next week must have been dipped twice in August.

Calves	6—decrease	2	14	6

All classes of cattle harder and more uncertain of sale. Choice small-weighted heifers and oxen figured 44s. to 45s. per cwt.; fancy stocks and a few specially good drafts Herefords from 44s. to 46s. 6d. and 47s. 6d. After the market, on sale reckoning, figured made of 41s. 6d. to 42s. 6d. per cwt. for the fair run of medium to heavy cattle of fair good finish, and, say, 40s. to 41s. 6d. per suitable shipping bullocks, coming to the lower and coarser grades of beasts, market ruled very uneven and slumpy. To say that half-meated cattle were too numerous and could not be sold would be misleading; in fact, there were buyers for everything of useful character, storish or otherwise, but at prices which were not generally acceptable to owners. In many sales many drafts of such cattle changed ownership at 36s. to 37s. and 38s. per cwt. Beef cows of best grade readily sold at 32s. 6d. to 36s. and 37s. 6d. per cwt. to local and Northern fleshers and shippers. Medium sorts 27s. 6d. to 30s.; inferior back to, say, 19s. 6d. per cwt. The fat bulls offered made 33s. to 36s. 6d. per cwt.

Sheep and lamb market ruled much slower and uncertain than previously; in fact, in a general way there was a slight slip back on last week's firmer position of things. A nice fat lamb, and also handy-weighted prime mutton up to 70s. per head value about maintained former terms, but otherwise any advantage was in buyers' favour. Fair offtake for shipment of hoggets inside 46s. to 56s. and 58s. per head. These figures also represent about best lamb run, but small, inferior lambs back down to, say, 25s. each. Prime mutton 9d. to 10d., fancy 10½d. per lb; other sorts 8d. to 8½d.; prime ewes 56s. to 60s. and 63s.

DUBLIN DAIRY.—Just 360 exhibits were returned for sale on this market. Trade quieter for both English and home dairy types of cows, with values generally bumping heavily on previous bottom rates, but for the more ordinary descriptions owners were occasionally obliged to accept 20/- to 30/- per head less money. Still at currencies there was fairly a good sell up. Choice heavy capacity and aged milchers £25 to £30 each, perhaps £31. Fair run of young English cows and heifers £21 to £24 and £26, useful dairy cows £15 to £20, small and inferior £11 to £15 each. Local dairymen ... wanting suitable fresh stockers inside £16 to £22 or £23.

DUBLIN PIG.—Market offered 796 head of pigs, being 25 more than previous gathering. There was a fair attendance of buyers and trade opened fairly encouraging, but owing to reserve and apathy of the few shipping men, local bacon and pork buyers adopted a like cautious attitude, when market became slower and slumpy, culminating in a fall of 2s. to 5s. per cwt. on opening currencies. Average weight of prime class hogs, say, 70/- to 76/- per cwt. dead weight reckoning, perhaps, 86/- to 90/- and 92/6 per cwt.; sow pigs, say, 68/- to 76/- per cwt. dead weight. Young stores in decidedly improved demand.

YORK.—Larger supply of Irish cattle than for some weeks; and majority of good quality, full of condition. Farmers are busy and attendance was poor. Trade slow; late rates barely maintained. Moderate supply of dairy cattle, and 10/- to 20/- less money was taken for all but best. Good entry sheep. Slow trade ...

BRISTOL.—A moderate supply of beef at 90/- to 92/-. A fair supply of mutton at 1/1 to 1/2; lambs 1/2 to 1/4. Five hundred store cattle on offer, for which trade was slow; not all sold. Milch cows £24 to £28, up to £34 for extras.

BIRMINGHAM PIG.—Consignments fewer and a full supply, but no shortage, owing to large arrivals early in the week. Trade improved, with values rather on the easier side, but steady for bacons, and sows 6d. cheaper. Quotations—Sizeable bacons 17/-, cutters 17/- to 17/6, and sows 14/- per score dead weight.

DAIRY SHORTHORN BREEDERS.

JUMPING COMPETITIONS AT ADARE.

SHEEP-DOG TRIALS.

FROM OUR AGRICULTURAL CORRESPONDENT.
LIMERICK, Thursday.

Under the auspices of the County Limerick Branch of the Irish Dairy Shorthorn Breeders' Society, a successful series of jumping competitions was held at the Deerpark, Adare, to-day. The fixture was largely attended, despite a heavy rainfall during the earlier part of the programme, and those present were rewarded by a good afternoon's sport.

Some of the best jumpers in the country were among the competitors in the four classes provided, and several excellent performances were witnessed.

Mrs. Arthur Wall carried off two first prizes, including the stone wall championship, with Twinkle, a stylish mover, who tied with his stable companion, Jack. When they were asked to jump off, however, Jack was withdrawn.

The competition confined to children excited keen interest, and resulted in an additional prize being awarded.

The sheep-dog trials took place in a downpour, but they attracted much attention, and in another field there was clay-pigeon shooting.

The judges were Mr. A. Pollok, Captain Considine and Mr. Peter Fitzgerald.

The secretarial work was in the capable hands of Mr. T. J. Moran, Askeaton, while Mr. L. Kirkpatrick, farm manager, Adare, was responsible for the general arrangements.

A ladies' committee, under the presidency of Mrs. Kirkpatrick, had charge of the tea tent.

RIDING AND JUMPING.

Competition A (best horse over the course)—Mrs. Arthur's Twinkle (Owner), 1; Mrs. Maher's Kilbarry (R. Bennett), 2; M. Mitchell's Ladylough (Mitchell, Jun.), 3. Sixteen competed.

Competition B (best horse over the course), first prize-winner in previous class debarred—Master H. Russell's Playboy (Owner), 1; Lady Helen McCalmont's Royal Gris (Mrs. Marshall), 2; J. J. O'Meara's First Attempt (Ml. Gleeson), 3. Twenty-four competed.

Champion Stone Waller—Won by Mrs. Wall's Twinkle. Her other horse, Jack, was equal, but was scratched in the jump off. Lady McCalmont's Royal Gris was runner-up. Thirteen competed.

Competition Confined to Children, 15 years and under, on ponies 14.2 hands and under—J. J. O'Meara's First Attempt (Ml. Gleeson), 1; Master Harry Russell's Playboy (Owner), 2; Master Leon Hutch's The Coulin (Owner), 3. P. Gomez's Crecora (Master Gomez), additional prize.

SHEEP DOG TRIALS.

Sheep dog trials and demonstrations formed an interesting feature of the programme. In the first of these Mr. G. L. Pennefather, Goold's Cross, was awarded first and second prizes for the performance of his remarkably well-trained dogs, Nell and Kep, third prize going to Mr. A. L. Pennefather for Sweep.

SCHNEIDER TROPHY RACE.

ARRIVAL OF ITALIAN TEAM.

The five Italian high speed pilots who are to represent Italy in the Schneider Trophy contest arrived in London yesterday via Folkestone and Boulogne. They are Colonel Bernasconi, Lieutenant Monti, Lieutenant Cadringher, Warrant Officer Dalmolin, and Sergeant-Major Agello. They were met at the station by the Italian Air Attaché in London, Colonel Bitossi.

"A telegram informed us that they were on their way from Italy," an official of the Embassy told a reporter, "and we were only just in time to get to the station to meet them. All the members of the flight looked fit and well."

They were driven to the Air Attaché's house at Queen's Gate Gardens, and, after a short stay there, they left in two cars for Calshot. They will begin practice to-day.

Just after daybreak yesterday there was a hope of getting in about an hour of high-speed flying. The British Supermarine S 6 was, in fact, towed over towards Lee-on-Solent, with Flying-Officer Atcherley in the cockpit. All looked ideal for flying, but it was found that there was a heavy swell on the sea, and the machine had to be brought back to the station.

FLOODS IN THE NORTH.

SERIOUS DAMAGE TO CROPS.

Heavy rain, caused by thunderstorms, fell in many Northern districts yesterday, and caused considerable damage to crops in the fields, while ofloding damaged others. There was a regular deluge of rain at Whitehead. Various culverts were unable to cope with the rush of water, and several streets became impassable for pedestrians. Many residences on the Promenade were flooded by the rush of water down Marine avenue.

CLOGHER VALLEY SHOW.

HORSES AND CATTLE OF GOOD QUALITY.

FROM OUR AGRICULTURAL CORRESPONDENT.
AUGHNACLOY, Thursday.

The nineteenth annual show promoted by the Clogher Valley Agricultural Society was held to-day at Clogher Park, which had been kindly lent by the Most Rev. Dr. McKenna, Bishop of Clogher. The society was instituted in 1904, and with the exception of four years during the Great War its annual shows of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, fruit, flowers, and poultry have been held alternately at Clogher and Fivemiletown.

This year's entries showed an increase of 27 over those of 1928, the increase being noticeable in the horse and sheep sections. The cattle classes, however, showed a slight decrease. The cattle exhibits, in the opinion of the judge, were well up to last year's standard, yearlings being, if anything, somewhat better. The judge in the horse section considered the exhibits—particularly those of young horses—better than last year's.

SPECIAL PRIZES.

The Stewart Cup, for the best shorthorn bull calved in 1928, again was won by Mr. Henry Pringle, J.P., Moor Farm, Ballygawley.

Thomas Campbell, Lisnanachery, Clogher, once more won the Pringle Cup for the best shorthorn cow in calf or milk.

The Brooke Cup, for the best shorthorn heifer, over one and under two years old, went to Mr. Henry Pringle, J.P., Moor Farm.

The Clogher Valley Railway Cup, for dairy cows, in calf or milk, was won by John McLaughlin, Fair View, Enniskillen.

Mrs. Barnett, Ballagh, won the Abraham Cup, for the best pen of utility poultry.

REVENGE ON LANDLADY.

LODGER WRECKS THE HOUSE.

Gilbert Hanson, aged 35, a one-legged man, of no settled address, was committed to the Assizes at Liverpool yesterday on a charge of doing £80 worth of damage to furniture in a house in St. Andrew's road, Liverpool, where he had formerly lodged. It was stated that during the landlady's absence Hanson entered the house, broke forty-seven panes of glass, smashed the pictures, slit a leather suite with a knife, broke two doors with a hammer and set a bed on fire. Even the leaves of a plant had been cut off.

Hanson denied setting fire to the bed, but pleaded guilty, under great provocation, to smashing the furniture. He asserted that it was the landlady's fault. He was given legal aid, but refused bail.

STORE CATTLE SALES.

MESSRS. GANLY, SONS AND CO.

There were nearly as many cattle as last week, but quality all round was not so good, nor were there so many aged beasts. Trade as a consequence was scarcely as good and there were more lots unsold, but prices for aged lots showed no change, and some pens of Polly and Horned bullocks and heifers from £19 15/- to £16 5/-, made from 36/- to 40/- per cwt. Plainer lots from 33/- to 35/-. A choice consignment of Aberdeen-Angus bullocks from Miss V. Tynte realised 42/6 per cwt.

MESSRS. GAVIN LOW, LTD.

The number of store cattle coming forward continues small, and good conditioned lots, particularly bullocks, are scarce. There was a good attendance of both home and cross-Channel buyers at yesterday's sale, and, notwithstanding the depressed tone of the beef market, bidding was keen, and all best lots were disposed of at prices favouring sellers. Prices of secondary sorts were unsteady, but most of these were eventually cleared around recent rates. Quotations:—Aberdeen-Angus and Hereford crosses made from 37/- to 44/- per cwt.; horned bullocks and heifers from 33/- to 42/- per cwt.

MESSRS. R. AND J. WILKINSON.

There was a somewhat larger entry of store cattle, though still below normal for the time of year, and with a fair attendance of buyers there was a steady demand at late prices for nice quality in forward condition, and a good clearance was made. Some lots of young cattle did not meet much inquiry, excepting those of really nice quality. Bullocks, at £20 10/-, £19 15/-, £19 and £17 17/6, made from 38/- to 40/6 per cwt.; shorthorn heifers, at £17 2/6, were 41/-, and a few lots of A.A. crosses, at £18 and £15 7/6, made 42/6 and 43/- per cwt. Kerry bullocks, at £12 and £11 12/6, were 36/- and 37/- per cwt.

A man killed through falling in front of a train at St. David's Station, Exeter, on Wednesday evening was identified yesterday afternoon as Ernest Meadowcroft, aged 60, retired draper, Plymouth.

DUBLIN COUNTY COUNCIL.

SEPARATION OF LOUTH FROM GRANGEGORMAN.

LAW AGENT TO BE CONSULTED.

At a meeting of the Dublin County Council, held yesterday, the separation of Louth area from the Joint Management of the Grangegorman Mental Hospital was discussed.

Mr. J. J. Shiel, who, with Mr. P. Belton, represented the Dublin County Council at the conference held at the Ministry of Local Government for the consideration of the claim of the Louth County Council for payment of £97,232 by the other contributing Councils on the separation of County Louth from the Joint Committee in control of the Grangegorman Mental Hospital, said that Mr. McCarron, who presided, gave details of the Louth claim, which is based wholly on a valuation procured by County Louth. He (Mr. Shiel) protested that his Council had not been officially consulted on the matter. He claimed that the bodies which constituted the Joint Committee were entitled to be officially informed and consulted, and that a public inquiry should be held at which the Councils would be represented. This was ruled out, and the Commissioners of Dublin put forward the case that the valuation submitted by Louth could not be accepted by the other Councils. This figure represented a new asylum instead of an old one, and a complete asylum instead of a part of an asylum. The premises valued comprised buildings some of which were never built for an asylum, and others which had been added to an unsuitable building. If vacated in the morning by all the authorities, the buildings would be worthless. The remaining Councils could not agree to pay more than the value to them of the property left available by Louth.

LOUTH'S SHARE OF COST.

Mr. Shiel said that the conference agreed that the proportion of loans chargeable to County Louth was £17,525, and for pensions £5,000, which that county should bear, and that it should also bear 10 per cent. of the cost and of any amount found to be payable as a result of the pending litigation as to reduction of salaries and wages. The 31st March next was fixed as the date of separation, and Mr. McCarron refused to disclose the basis of the principle of valuation upon which the Minister would arrive at his decision.

Continuing, Mr. Shiel said that, although they were granted an inquiry in 1920, when Louth's petition was refused, the other Councils were not considered on this occasion at all. In view of the fact that a Joint Board was constituted by resolutions passed by the joint bodies, he contended that separation could not take place unless all the bodies agreed. He suggested that, in the first instance, their law adviser should advise if the procedure adopted on this occasion was in accordance with the law, and, if the Council were so advised, it would be to the benefit of the Council to take their stand on the same position as that taken by the Commissioners—that the proper basis of valuation is on the value of the accommodation which results to the Joint Board because of the withdrawal of the Louth patients. Three hundred thousand pounds was the valuation placed on a building which would not be available for additional accommodation after the Louth patients left, because it was insanitary and useless.

A MATTER FOR LEGAL ADVICE.

It was agreed to adopt Mr. Shiel's suggestion—that the matter should be referred to the Law Agent for a report, to be considered by a special committee authorised to prepare the case for the Dublin County Council for presentation to the Minister.

ROAD WORKERS' WAGES.

REDUCTION ACCEPTED.

A report of the Finance Committee was read, recommending a reduction in the wages of road workers.

Mr. Thomas Kennedy, Vice-President of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, wrote that he was instructed to inform the Council that the road workers had agreed, under protest, to accept a reduction of 3s. 6d. per week in the wages, as suggested by the Council.

It was agreed that the reduction should operate as from the 12th September next.

The Chairman asked what would happen in the case of men who were not members of the Transport Workers' Union.

Mr. Early (solicitor) said that it would be necessary to terminate the employment of any man who refused to accept the decrease by giving him a week's notice.

It was agreed to issue a notice of the proposed reduction with the paying orders for the wages next week.

WINNERS OF COUNTY COUNCIL SCHOLARSHIPS.

It was announced that the following students had been awarded scholarships at secondary schools:—Joan E. MR. DRUMM'S RESEARCH WORK.

Mr. P. Belton asked if it was true that Mr. Drumm, who had been subsidised at the expense of the ratepayers of County Dublin for research work, had invented a process for the preservation of peas. Is it not a fact, he continued, that he has sold this invention to the Belgians? We have footed the bill to produce this preparation, and it is sold to a foreign firm to enable it to compete with Irish farmers.

Mr. Nugent said that when Mr. Drumm was before the Scholarship Committee he stated that his preserved peas investigation had concluded prior to his appointment as research student.

CHARGES AGAINST KILCULLEN MAN.

RETURNED FOR TRIAL IN CUSTODY.

Fifteen witnesses were examined at Naas District Court yesterday when James Collins, Kilcullen, son of a local mill-owner, was charged on seven counts with the larceny of forty-one sacks of flour, the property of Mrs. O'Connell, Kilcullen, and with the possession of firearms and explosives. In a further indictment he was charged with the larceny of an oil engine.

Superintendent Murphy, prosecuting, said that when the Guards searched the premises of the accused man they found as much explosives as would wipe out the whole village of Kilcullen. Collins worked in his father's mill, which adjoined the bakery establishment of Mrs. O'Connell, the woman who was robbed.

Mrs. O'Connell, answering Superintendent Murphy, said that she had 212 ten-stone sacks of flour up to July 25. On subsequent dates she found several bags had disappeared, and she communicated with the authorities. She accompanied the Guards to Inchaquire, where she saw flour similar to the kind she stocked.

Henry Murphy, an employé of Collins's father, said that no flour came to the mill in July—only Indian meal. After July he delivered flour and meal to Dolan, Ballymore. He did not know where the flour came from. On August 8 he took four sacks of flour to Hughes, of Inchaquire, and on the 13th delivered twelve sacks. On the 14th he saw two and a half sacks in the mill. On that date he had a conversation with the accused and told him the Guards had been inquiring, whereupon the accused told him to say he delivered only ten stone to Dolan.

Mr. Hughes also deposed to obtaining supplies from the accused at 39s. per sack.

Peter Hogan, an employé of the mill, stated that he never saw an oil engine there.

Edward Walsh deposed that, prior to the arrest of Collins, he demanded production of invoices for the flour, but the latter failed to produce them.

When arrested, Collins remarked: "Is the game up?" When asked about the oil engine, accused said he bought it in 1922. The bombs found, he said, were charged with "war flour." The flour alleged to be stolen was bought by him, and he never heard of flour missing from Mrs. O'Connell's.

Superintendent Murphy deposed that he saw the contents of the bombs, and found they were charged with "Irish cheddar." He knew it was "Irish cheddar" because at one time he made it himself.

Further evidence having been given, accused was returned for trial in custody to Naas Circuit Court in December.

SPARK FROM ENGINE SETS FIRE TO CLOTHING.

While Joan Murphy (5), of Seaforth parade, Blackrock, was playing on the strand between Merrion and Blackrock on Wednesday evening a spark from a passing railway engine set fire to her clothing.

Thomas Power, of Rock road, who happened to be near by, ran to her assistance and extinguished the blaze. He had her removed in a motor car to the Royal City of Dublin Hospital. After treatment she was able to return home.

FIRE IN WICKLOW.

WORKSHOP AND MACHINERY ROOM DESTROYED.

The large workshop and machinery room at the rear of Messrs. Coleborn and Hopkins's garage, Abbey street, Wicklow, and their property, was destroyed by fire yesterday. While their employés were at work in the repair shop bits of the burning roof fell upon them. Built of corrugated iron, timber and felt roofing, the premises were quickly ablaze, and, despite immediate use of the local fire apparatus, and the attention of the owners, their workmen, Civic Guards and townspeople, the place was destroyed. A lorry in for overhauling and a valuable lathe and other tools were saved, but a large supply of machinery and equipment, as well as a large engine for running the machinery, were all burnt.

The fire brigade succeeded in preventing the fire reaching an adjoining shed, which sheltered a petrol pump, or the main buildings opposite the workshops. The damage is estimated at £1,500.

PÆONIES.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Gardening Correspondent says:—

Many hardy subjects can be planted in autumn and spring with equal advantage, according to the suitability of the weather; but there are some exceptions to this rule, and foremost may be mentioned the Pæonies, which should always be planted in early autumn. They must be given well-prepared and deeply dug soil, and, as they very much resent disturbance, they should be planted where they can remain unlifted for years. That is one of the gardener's many difficulties—looking ahead! Also, is it not a privilege; for our work is something which will endure, provided pests, diseases and droughts, etc., allow it to do so? However, to return to the Pæony: there are now so many lovely varieties, both single and double, that a good catalogue is worth studying.

POULTRY, CAGE BIRDS, DAIRY.

THE SEASON OF REPAIRS.

Writing under this heading in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—

Wooden walls should be gone over carefully, filling up all crevices. Many people are careless about having chinks in the wall, thinking it is a good thing to admit air in this way. Such openings only cause draughts, which are very bad in a roosting house. Ventilation should be supplied in proper ways, but every house should be draught-proof as well as rain-proof. Boards that have rotted in parts or got broken should be taken out altogether and new ones fitted in. There is nothing better for the outside of a wooden house than a coat of tar, which keeps the house thoroughly dry. Some people do not like the appearance of tar, and prefer paint. If paint is used, two coats should be put on, and the inside should be brushed over with creosote. This latter not only preserves the wood, but keeps away vermin. Tar should always be put on hot, as it soaks into the wood better and dries off thinner.

Doors, shutters, hinges and fastenings should all be examined. Outside gates should receive attention, as often they will not close properly, owing to the posts becoming loose. Wire fencing should be carefully broken or detached from the posts. It can be mended by cutting out any rusty or broken meshes and tying a new piece on with wire. Be sure the fences between pens are all intact, as trouble may be caused by the birds getting from one pen to the other, especially if they are breeding pens.
